FATAL SOMERVILLE SHOOTING

ALLIES CAPTURE 20,000 GERMANS

DRIVE NETS NEW GAINS TODAY

By FREDERICK PALMER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

Press Camp Headquarters in Northern France, July 3.—Fighting has continued throughout all parts of the battle line. Above the Ancre River there has been no change importance. British artillery shelled Thiepval and LaBoisselle heavily, and there has been severe fighting the latter place.

North of Fricourt the advance continues satisfactorily. The Germans are shelling Montauban violently, but the British appear to be well established there.

More than 14,000 prisoners have been captured by the English up to-date.

(Paris reports have told of the capture by the French of 6,000 Germans, making a total of 20,000 captured by the allies since the drive began.)

By CHARLES F. BERTELLI.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, July 3.—Having smashed the first line positions of the Germans in the sector of the Somme, the French are now pounding away at the second line.

The French War Office in a communique issued today announced that three miles of the German second line, between Mereaucourt wood and Assevillers, south of the Somme, have been captured.

The village of Herbecourt has been captured by storm, in spite of the furious resistance of the Germans. Between Estrees and Assevillers, the German line, which was defended by thirty-one battalions of troops, has crumpled beneath the blows of the allies.

In the lulls of the infantry fighting the big guns of the French and British are continuously bombarding the German positions.

Mrs. Proctor Blames Mrs. Jack Gardner for Her Blighted Romance

Mrs. Marguerite Burtt Proctor whose husband, George W. Proctor, a protege of Mrs. John L. Gardner, is suing for divorce.

Mrs. John L. Gardner, noted arbiter of Back Bay society, is blamed by Mrs. Marguerite Burtt Proctor in connection with the shattering of the latter's romance with George W. Proctor, Boston pianist and protege of Mrs. Gardner.

Mrs. Proctor, replying to her husband's filing of divorce suit against her, tells a remarkable story which gives the first details of why love's young dream, in her case was so quickly and so unexpectedly blighted.

The young wife's story weaves Mrs. Gardner's name into the domestic relations of the Proctors. After saying that Mrs. Gardner was very good to the pianist, Mrs. Proctor adds:

"I expected that when we were married we could be by ourselves to a reasonable degree. But no; I had to submit to the constant interference of a third person."

The young wife says she and her husband were dependent for their very food on Mrs. Gardner's bounty. The wife makes these statements:

That when Mrs. Gardner didn't send over food for them, they had nothing to eat.

That once when her husband and Mrs. Gardner quarreled, the Proctors had no food for three days.

That Mrs. Gardner "supplied everything."

That Proctor accepted it without the slightest hesitation.

That once she (the wife) was locked in a room while her

SUCCUMBS TO LONG ILLNESS

Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world, who had hundreds of acquaintances in Boston died today at her home in New York after a long illness. She was eighty-one years old.

It was reported a week ago that Mrs. Green had suffered a paralytic stroke, but this was denied by her son, Colonel Edward Green, who stated that his mother was suffering from ailments incident to old age.

For months, Mrs. Green's physical condition had been such that she could not give her personal attention to her vast fortune. In the meantime, her affairs were administered by her son.

When Mrs. Green used to visit Boston she was accustomed to pay a dollar a day for a hotel room. She sometimes patronized the one-armed lunch rooms, she did not believe in squandering her money.

For many years she lived in a flat in Hoboken for which she paid $18 a month. From this house, she traveled daily to New York by ferry-boat, walking from the pier at both the beginning and end of her journey.

Economy with her was a passion. A plain black dress of the most simple character, which could hardly have cost more than a few dollars, was her regular garb. She wore a black poke-bonnet of the type that went out of style 30 years ago. Her clothes were always well-worn, but they were never shabby.

At different periods of her long life, Mrs. Green had the name "Dew-

STATE TO FEED THE ROOKIES

Governor McCall today issued orders for the State of Massachusetts to supply the "rookies" at Camp Whitney with food the next time they go hungry through the red tape or mistakes of the United States government.

The order is regarded as unusual in military circles. It is said to be the first time that any State has found it necessary to hold itself in readiness to provide food for troopers who had been mustered into the service of the United States government.

"The State will supplement, if necessary, the issue of rations by the government, so there will be full rations for every man," Governor McCall announced.

Governor McCall said that the complaints against food and equipment were made in "exceptional cases" but he admitted that the complaints were serious enough to require him to "keep in touch with the situation."

DESCRIBES CONDITIONS.

Governor McCall, at the State House today, was asked to describe what he found as a result of his hurried visit to Camp Whitney Saturday afternoon.

He declared that through the failure of the Federal government to furnish the boys with proper uniforms, they "had a right to growl."

"There had been complaints about food," said the Governor, "and I found there was some ground for complaint in exceptional cases, in the hurry of starting.

"Rations were issued by the United States government on the basis of a requisition made every four days. It happened, in some cases, after the requisitions were made, the number of men in the company was increased and there was not food enough to go round.

"The State will supplement, if necessary, the issue of rations by the

MAN IS SHOT IN SOMERVILLE QUARREL

Allen O'Brien of Broadway, East Somerville, was probably fatally shot today by Charles H. Hunnewell of Fatridge avenue, Somerville, during a quarrel over children.

The shooting occurred in the front yard of the Hunnewell home. The bullet struck O'Brien in the stomach. He was removed to the Somerville Hospital, where it was said his condition was critical. Hunnewell was arrested.

The police arrived a few minutes after the shooting, having been previously summoned by a daughter of Hunnewell when the argument between teh two men began.

According to the police, the trouble started when Mrs. Amanda Peterson, who occupies the apartment under the Hunnewells, objected to the Hunnewell children sitting in the doorway.

Mrs. Hunnewell and Mrs. Peterson had an argument, in which Hunnewell and O'Brien finally took part.

TELLS OF THREATS.

Hunnewell went upstairs and later returned to the front yard. According to Mrs. Hunnewell, O'Brien then appeared at a window of the Peterson apartment and made threats against Hunnewell.

Mrs. Hunnewell said she sent her daughter, Mildred, aged twelve, to a nearby drugstore to summon the police.

The men continued to argue for some time, and finally O'Brien jumped out of the window, according to Mrs. Hunnewell, and started to beat Hunnewell, who is blind of an eye and crippled in one arm as a result of an accident.

CHILDREN SEE SHOOTING.

Then Hunnewell, it is said, drew a revolver from his coat pocket and fired. O'Brien turned and ran into the Peterson apartment, where he fell ion the floor. A few minutes later the police patrol with three officers arrived.

The shooting was witnesser by the three Hunnewell children and a number of other children, all of whom screamed as the two men struggled in the yard.

PUT WITHDRAWAL UP TO PERSHING

BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE.

Washington, July 3.—"There is no change in the administration's policy regarding Mexico," Secretary of State Robert Lansing said today.

Reiterating that statement, the State and War Departments today refused to assume responsibility for the action of General John J. Pershing, commanding the punitive expedition now in Mexican territory, in moving his various troops until today there are none further south than 100 miles of the international boundary.

Pershing acted upon his own initiative. Army officers pointed out today that this was necessary if his column was not to be utterly vulnerable. By concentrating Pershing today has a fighting force that can hold itself against any force the Mexicans could throw against it.

In addition he has withdrawn his men from the arid sections, where they could not get even ordinary forage for their horses—this being the dry season—and has reduced the risk of having his communications cut and his transport trains attacked, to a minimum.

In spite of the War and State Departments and of the army officers keen observers in Washington today maintained that Pershing's move to the rear and the general attitude of the administration indicate the withdrawal of the punitive expedition.

While the administration officials argued that the punitive expedition would be maintained unchanged the War Department took steps today which indicated that hereafter the American side of the boundary is to be patrolled in such a way that further raids will be out of the question.

Heretofore Major-General Funston has been seriously hampered by the enormous stretch of territory he has had to command. This has been divided, although the order doing so may not be made immediately effective. General Funston hereafter will be in charge of all of the present southern department to a point just east of El Paso. From El Paso to a point some thirty miles east of Douglas, Ariz., will be created the department of New Mexico, of which General Pershing is to have command. It specifically is stated at the War Department that although General Pershing's official headquarters are to be in El Paso he will stay where he is for the present. West of the 109th meridian is created the western department and Major-General J. F. Bell will command it with headquarters at Douglas.

PERSHING MAY BE PROMOTED

The fact that General Pershing, a brigadier, is given a command equal to that of Funston and Bell, major generals, is accepted here as indicating the former's promotion to that

ALLIES REPORT CAPTURE OF SEVERAL MORE MILES OF GERMAN TRENCHES

BATTLE ON SECOND LINE

For a week or more the shelling has continued day and night.

Late dispatches from the front show that the German line has been beat back from five to seven miles by the mighty offensive of the British and French troops.

Military critics hail this achievement as one of remarkable importance in view of the strength of the German positions and the great amount of artillery and ammunition massed behind the German front.

The Germans have the advantage of strategic highways and railways for the quick shifting of troops, but this advantage has proved futile in the efforts to halt the advance of the allied troops.

The capture of Frise, south of the Somme, has wiped out the German salient which extended into the French line at that point and has also placed the allies in a position to menace important military roads.

The chief objective of the French forces taking part in the offensive is Peronne. If Peronne is taken the allies will then continue their drive toward Cambrai, it is believed.

General Berthaut, the famous French military expert, believes that Peronne can be taken. It is about six miles from the scene of the present fighting.

In the meantime the British forces are hammering away at the German positions defending Bapaume.

Paris newspapers declare that the advance thus far accomplished has fully justified the expectations of the French and British military men.

Compared with the German gains during the first days of fighting at Verdun, the allies have been able to achieve much more than the Teutons.

PRESSURE TO BE STEADY.

It is pointed out, however, that the people must not expect a spectacular dash. The program of the French and British War Offices is for the exerting of steady pressure without any let up.

The Germans, realizing that powerful attacks were forthcoming, following the opening of a concentrated bombardment on a fifty-mile front, concentrated troops in the Somme district to repel their assaults.

South of Somme there are twenty-four German divisions (480,000 men) mostly making up the sixth German army, commanded by the Crown Prince of Bavaria.

But the allies' preparations were fully commensurate with the size of the offensive enterprise. Vast reserves of men, guns and ammunition have been piled up behind the allied front.

ALL POSITIONS HELD.

The text of the War Office communique follows:

"North of the Somme the enemy made no attacks during the night against the positions we had conquered from him and organized.

"South of the Somme, the battle went on with success for our armies all of yesterday and last night. We have entirely occupied on a front of five kilometres (three miles) two lines of trenches in the German's second position from the wood of Mareuccourt, which we occupied, to the immediate approaches of Assevillers.

"Between these two points, as the result of a brilliant attack, we have taken the village of Herbecourt, which was strongly organized by the enemy.

"Further south we have approached Assevillers, the borders of which, north and west, are entirely in our hands. To the north, between the village of Estrees and Assevillers, our troops made steady progress. New prisoners and many pieces of heavy artillery, which have not yet been counted, were captured during the course of these actions.

"Based on positive information we have identified on the front attacked by the French since the first day of July thirty-nine German battalions. According to the report of prisoners, thirty-one of these battalions have suffered heavy losses and are entirely broken up.

PRISONERS VERY YOUNG.

"Most of the prisoners taken by us on the first and second of July are very young. The result of questioning them shows that our artillery preparations were extremely effective, not only destroying defensive organizations, but suppressing all communications with the rear, preventing the revictualing of the soldiers and the receiving of orders from headquarters.

"During our preparatory artillery action our aviation corps set on fire thirteen German captive balloons. Since the first of July our aviators have driven all enemy machines from the front during the attack.

"Only nine enemy aviators showed themselves, none of whom could cross our front. One of their machines was destroyed.

"South of the Avre river, in the neighborhood of Dancourt des Loges wood, we have penetrated German trenches which we cleaned up with grenades.

"By a sudden attack in the region of Lassigny we took enemy trenches in Verdel wood, near Cannyre-Mats.

FOE ACTIVE AT VERDUN

"Our patrols also captured prisoners in the neighborhood of Moulin Sousfouteuen.

"In Champagne, one of our patrols captured some prisoners in the neighborhood of Prunay and brought back a machine gun.

"On the left bank of the Meuse the night was comparatively calm, except for the bombardments of our positions to the west of Hill No. 304.

"On the right bank, this morning, after a violent bombardment the Germans made a strong attack upon the Damloup redoubt, which they took, but from which they were promptly driven out a little later by our counter attacks. We still hold this position."

Germans Withdraw South of the Somme.

Berlin, July 3. — British attacks against the German positions north of the Somme were repulsed last night, but the War Office admitted today that, south of the river, the Germans withdrew under cover of darkness to their second line positions.

Violent fighting is in progress both to the north and south of the Somme, with savage bombardment of the German lines.

Whole villages within the German lines are being shattered by the concentrated fire of the big guns, and severe struggles are taking place around som of thm in advanced positions, where both sides are contending for the ruins.

Following is the text of the official report:

"West front—English and French attacks north of the Somme failed to secure them any advantage. The enemy's losses were extraordinary.

"South of the Somme, we withdrew our second line positions last night a division of German troops which had been maintained in the first line positions.

"West of the Meuse. French attempts to retake sections of Hill No. 304, which we had captured, led to minor engagements.

"East of the Meuse, the enemy exhausted himself in fruitless attacks against Thiaumont and the Froide de Terre ridge. Southwest of Froide de Terre, the enemy temporarily concentrated our foremost trenches over a front of 600 metres, but was immediately driven out.

"Southeast of Vaux, the Damloup redoubt is in our possession, having been taken last night. One hundred prisoners and several machine guns were captured.

"French attacks at Bois le Prairie were repulsed."

GERMANS PREPARE FOR NAVAL BATTLE

Copenhagen, July 3.—The Sevenska Dagbladet of Stockholm declares that Germany is preparing for a great offensive in the Baltic. Many German torpedo boats and destroyers have arrived at Libau. The command of the fleet, it is stated, will be transferred from Kiel to Libau.

WAR SUMMARY

The British and French official statements today record further gains in the battle of the Somme River. But the gains are in the nature of consolidations, wiping out dangerous salients and straightening angles.

The great allied drive has now straightened the line from Arras to a point west of Peronne, where before the German forces had driven a wedge into the allied front. This wedge has been destroyed.

Whether the allied drive will be continued at this point is somewhat uncertain. If the allies push on here they will subject themselves to a German fire from front and from both flanks. It is possible that the allies will now shift their effort to some other point where the line zigzags in a salient pointing in their direction.

If the drive is pushed home on the Albert-Arras line where it began, the first goal of strategic importance is Peronne, southeast of Albert. A sufficiently determined advance would come after about seventeen miles—or about fourteen from the present line—to Cambrai, a railroad centre of the first importance.

The allies are continuing their pressure on all fronts. In their attack west of Czernowitz and Kolomea, the Russians claim continued gains. Northward, in the Tarnopol region, the German reinforcements to the Austrian forces have apparently checked the advance and pushed the Russians slightly backward.

The present situation in this theatre of war is peculiar, as the Russians are thrusting a salient into Austrian territory along the Rumania border. Until Rumania comes in with the allies the position of this force is not a strong one. But if Rumania comes in, Rumania and Russia could cooperate against the Austrians with good effect.

The fighting about Verdun does not appear to have slackened much in vigor in spite of the allied drive at the westward end of the line in France. There was vigorous fighting about Verdun yesterday, though no results of importance were achieved on either side.

The Italians claim to continue their advance along the Posina-Astico line. But they have as yet regained no appreciable portion of the ground lost to the Austrians a few weeks ago.

War at Critical Moment for All the Belligerents

By Major Moraht,
Military Expert of the Berlin Tageblatt.

By International News Service.

Berlin, July 3.

THE general war situation shows the critical moment has been reached for all the belligerent armies. Our enemies as well as ourselves are at the high tide of their exertion.

Gradually in the course of the war our enemies have learned to undertake fairly simultaneously their attacks on the Central Powers.

We must admit that their organization of operations has become more energetic, more uniform. Their great resources in money and men, their great roads of supply on the open sea, make it more easy for them, under more difficult our final victory.

But if our enemies' organization has made advances, we have done so as well. Our belief in final victory has not been shaken.

ELEVEN TOWNS TAKEN BY THE ALLIES

London, July 3.—Wounded British soldiers arriving today from the Anglo-French front, where the Allies are on the offensive, describe the bombardment of the German lines as hellish.

Australians and Scotch troops have taken a prominent part in the early stages of the fighting and many of the wounded are from contingents.

Officers state that the British are now fighting "with the courage of conquerors" and are determined to break through the German lines or die trying.

Eleven villages have been captured from the Germans since the "big push" was started, but even yet the drive is scarcely in full swing. More than 10,000 German prisoners have been taken, while the German losses, due to the extraordinary artillery fire of the British and French, have been enormous.

It is believed that the Germans have lost no fewer than 30,000 men since the offensive opened.

The cannonades marking some stages of the battle at Verdun were characterized as unprecedented in their fury, but the bombardments of the French and British guns is even more severe. Defensive works which the Germans have been strengthening for a year were crumbled to powder beneath the storm of projectiles hurled against them.

STORM DAMAGE IN WATERTOWN

Lightning struck three times in Watertown early today. One of the bolts struck the chimney on the home of Arthur H. O'Neil, of No. 147 Summer street, entering the house, and overturned chairs and furniture, doing considerable damage. The other two bolts struck trees on lawns of residents of the same section.

Great Allied Drive Is Called Master-Stroke by British Army Expert

By CAPTAIN CECILE BATTINE.
Military Expert of the London Daily Telegraph.

London, July 3.—The allied armies for the first time since they began their operations against Germany have succeeded in co-ordinating their principal efforts and striking simultaneously at the vital centres of the hostile power.

Although the strategy adopted by the allied commanders even today is far from ideal, they have, at any rate, mastered and put into practice the first and most indispensable rule of military art. They are attacking their principal foe in such a manner as to prevent him from concentrating his reserves against each power in turn.

The Russian advance in Galicia is synchronized with the threat of an even more formidable offensive against von Hindenburg's widely extended line between the Pripet and the Gulf of Riga. This threat still hangs over the heads of the Germans, and may any day be converted into the most dangerous attack by the allied forces.

In the gallant effort now being executed the British army seems to have avoided the mistakes made at Nueve Chapelle and Loos in limiting its immediate objective and penetrating to a depth of less than one mile at the first bound.

It must be difficult for the average man to picture the events of Saturday morning. At a given signal the trenches, which have been crowded with troops, are suddenly left by the infantry, who clamber out to charge forward in successive waves of madly-excited men.

Probably the first rush takes the enemy by surprise and reaches the nearest trenches without attaching much fire owing to the thorough artillery and preparation.

The first line, reinforced, sweeps forward and into the second line of tortured wire and broken trenches. Then, however, the really perilous part of the enterprise begins.

Hidden machine guns squirt streams of bullets on any group of attacking troops who have closed up together. The German guns from the start chime in and, having shortened their range, begin to shower projectiles on the newly captured works.

The German infantry reserves come into action with rifles and machine guns and the critical phase of the combat develops. In order to hold what has been won the troops must respond rapidly to the orders of the officers and the supports of reserve must reach the fighting line in the nick of time.

Berlin Riots Follow Liebknecht Sentence

The Hague (via London), July 3.—Street riots in Berlin followed the sentencing of Dr. Carl Liebknecht, the Socialist leader, to penal servitude and dismissal from the army for attempted high treason and resistance to the authorities. The Berlin populace fought with attacks against the police and military. The soldiers fired into the crowd with the result that ten civilians and one soldier were wounded severely. Fifty Socialists were arrested after a wild scuffle. A cordon of infantry was thrown about Potsdamerplatz and popular assemblies there were prohibited by the garrison, reinforced by 2,000 infantry from Breslau. The Berlin police force also was strengthened.

DECLARE THAT GENERAL PERSHING WITHDREW FOR SAKE OF SAFETY

rank in the near future, under the new Army bill.

Pershing is a son-in-law of U. S. Senator Warren, the ranking minority member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. It has been suggested that a Major General will be selected as Commander in Chief of all three departments shortly and friends of General Pershing here said today he might get the post. This is unlikely, however, as either General Thomas H. Barry, now in command in Chicago, or General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, probably will be chosen if such a post is created. General Leonard Wood is admittedly out of the running.

No word yet has come to the administration regarding the Carranza reply to this government's demand that he announce his attitude toward the American expedition now on Mexican soil. In this connection a hint has reached administration officials that the reply, a reiteration of the original statement, that if these troops moved any way but toward the American boundary they would be subject to attack, was ready to be handed to Consul General Hodgers last Saturday, but was held up after Ambassador Designate Arredondo had telegraphed to General Carranza the text of President Wilson's speech before the New York Press Club last Friday night.

SPEECH CAUSES CHANGE.

The speech will result in some modification of the position enunciated, it was asserted. Discussing the reply today Secretary of State Lansing said:

"We are not now pressing for an answer, although certain contingencies might arise at any moment which would cause us to do so."

The secretary refused to explain what these contingencies were.

The Latin-American diplomatic colony which has been trying to find a way to avert war has tried again to sound out the United States on the neutral zone solution. At last accounts that they have been informed that this government's policy is unchanged and that Carranza accepts the general position of the United States there can be no change of attitude toward him.

The customs division of the Treasury Department today began, at the request of Secretary of War Baker, efforts to find out how large a supply of arms and ammunition the Carranza army has on hand.

The customs officials were asked to furnish complete figures as to how much munitions had been permitted to reach Mexico from the United States in the past year and if possible to estimate the amount that has been shipped to Mexico from other countries.

The censorship established by the War Department to conceal military movements, and especially to stop public discussion of the unpreparedness of the Federal army and of the National Guard, is now being used, it was declared today, to check the momentum of public sentiment in favor of ending the Mexican nuisance.

It was believed in army quarters that if the United States should muddle the Mexican situation, and work it as it is at present going, no would intervene in the Texas-Tuxpam region to protect the vast oil interests of her nationals.

It was declared today that the American government would submit to another flag incident at Tampico rather than imperil the allies' oil supply. It was estimated that 75 per cent. of their oil passes through the port of Tampico.

State Department officials reiterated today that the issue of war or peace will be decided on the future acts of Carranza. They asserted that the de facto government's reply to the United States' demands need not necessarily be a full compliance with those demands to prevent war but they expect assurances that Carranza's government will afford adequate protection to American citizens in Mexico.

They also expect Carranza, while not yielding, to make counter propositions which will lead to further diplomatic discussions and pacific settlement of the entire Mexican question.

NO NEW CALLS.

No new National Guard units will be called out at the present time, according to an announcement made by the war department today. The following statement was issued:

"No new National Guard units are desired for organization at this time except to supply deficiencies in special arms.

"Federal recognition extended Third Field Artillery, National Guard, New York, formed from Sixty-Fifth New York Infantry. Regiment added to troops called into service United States. Equipment required and 4.7-inch howitzer material ordered shipped.

"Steps are being taken to call into service one field hospital unit from Florida. This unit not included in original call."

30,000 EXPECTED.

At least 30,000 National Guardsmen probably will be on duty at the Mexican border within the next two or three days. No official information of the number either at border points or on the way is available, but there is reason to believe this figure is not too high.

Soon after arrival each regiment of infantry or cavalry will be furnished with automobile machine guns, 250 of a new type of which were ordered recently for immediate delivery. As an experiment, the guns will be carried in automobiles instead of on the backs of pack mules and five chauffeurs will be required in each regiment to operate the cars.

Maine Militia Travels "De Luxe."

By GEORGE E. HANSEN

On Board Maine Special, with 2d Maine Infantry, July 3.—We are rattling through this country in the lap style in a solid train of Pullmans and are due at Laredo, Texas, early this evening.

Our train of day coaches was left behind at Kansas City, and a motley collection of up-to-date Pullman sleepers substituted. With the exception of some of the men in the second section, who are ill as the result of being inoculated, all the men are in the best of spirits and eager to reach the border.

As we draw near the line the hostility of the Mexicans grows more and more apparent. Groups of Mexican laborers line the station platforms and shake angry fists at us. Thus far there has been no real demonstration, aside from muttered threats that some of our students of Spanish say are decidedly unfavorable to the boys from Maine. "We should worry" is the slogan of all the men.

The Bethlehem Steel Company's Offer to Serve the United States

At a time when the expenses of the Government are so enormous—

Isn't it worth while finding out the actual facts before plunging ahead into an expenditure of $11,000,000 of the people's money for a Government armor plant?

To clear up the whole situation, and to put it on a basis as fair and business-like as we know how to express it, we now make this offer to the Government:

The Bethlehem Steel Company will manufacture armor plate for the Government of the United States at actual cost of operation plus such charges for overhead expenses, interest and depreciation as the Federal Trade Commission may fix. We will agree to this for such period as the Government may designate.

The House of Representatives voted down a proposal to empower the Federal Trade Commission to determine a fair price for armor, and allow private manufacturers opportunity to meet that price before the Government built its plant.

Isn't our proposition fair and ought it not to be accepted?

The measure is now before the United States Senate.

Militia Notes

Adjutant-General Cole today urged Governor McCall to authorize the formation of a Dental Corps, to be sent to the front for service with the Bay State troopers. The corps would consist of six dentists, one to administer the dental needs of every 1,600 men. They would start with the rank of First Lieutenant. It is expected that Governor McCall will issue the necessary authorization.

Private Walter L. Milliken of Company L, Fifth Infantry, who suffered a mild attack of chickenpox and was taken from the train at Jamestown, N. Y., today wired General Cole that he was completely recovered and would be ready for duty when quarantine was raised Thursday. Private Milliken will be ordered to report at Boston. In contradiction of the reports that Milliken had been neglected, General Cole made public several telegrams which had contained instructions for the Jamestown Hospital authorities to spare no expense in caring for Milliken.

The Bay State troops were short 1,200 horses when they left for the front. General Cole has been ordered by the War Department to purchase no more horses as the Massachusetts artillery and cavalry will be supplied with mounts from Southern zones.

General Cole went to Camp Whitney today to confer with Colonel Buck, U. S. A., on what he said was "the routine work of the camp."

• • •

Thanks to red tape, many a Massachusetts mother knows her son has joined the troops, but is unable to find what company, troop or branch of the service he is in. General Cole's department has employed a force of twenty-nine girls to copy the records at Framingham, which are in charge of the U. S. A. The records will be brought at once to the State House, where they will be open to public inspection.

COMPLAINTS END WITH NEW EQUIPMENT AT CAMP WHITNEY

government, so there will be full rations for every man.

"The most serious complaint was that concerning the lack of uniforms. The men were told to present themselves in their old clothes and that uniforms would be provided. The uniforms were shipped, we were told, from Philadelphia, and were probably run onto a siding.

"So the men had to appear in their old clothes when visitors came to camp. This was pretty humiliating. But the uniforms have come and that trouble is ended.

"Neither of these matters was under the jurisdiction of the State government."

Investigate Food at Framingham Camp.

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Whitney, Framingham, July 3.—Colonel John C. Chamberlain, U. S. A., from the Inspector General's Office, came here today under orders from Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the Department of the East, and investigated the equipment and food furnished the recruits in camp here.

He was received by Colonel Warren E. Sweetser, commander of the camp, and by Colonel Beaumont B. Buck, who is in charge of the recruiting at the mustering into the Federal service.

He talked with the recruiting officers and was shown over the camp, inspected the offices of the provisional companies, looked into the needs of the men in uniforms and equipment, visited the mess tents and inspected the food, the kitchens and the government stores in the arsenal.

ISSUE EQUIPMENT.

Captain William H. Wilson of the C. A. C. is in charge of the arsenal. He was issuing equipment today to the fourteen provisional companies, and it was expected uniforms would be furnished to all the recruits before tomorrow.

There will be sporting events tomorrow for the men and Captain W. J. Joyes of the Eighth is in charge of the arrangements. Prizes have been offered by officers and by civilians, who have sent contributions to Captain Joyes. There will be three extra boats at the camp tomorrow and visitors will be admitted from noon till 9 in the evening.

The supplies and equipment furnished the men have put an end to complaints—and just in time.

Thousands of visitors to the camp yesterday obtained personal proof of the truth of the men's complaints. They watched company sergeants in the provisional companies of recruits serve out to the men socks, underclothing, regulation shirts and trousers and the rest of the regulation outfit.

The thousands sing heard, from the mouths of the "rookies" themselves, that it was the AMERICAN they thanked for securing them, after every other appeal had failed.

THANK MR. HEARST.

Especially grateful to the AMERICAN were the members of M squadron, Second Provisional Regiment.

"The AMERICAN deserves a vote of thanks from every rookie in camp," declared one member of that company. "It was about time that somebody championed our cause and voiced our disgust at the begging appeals sent out for things they should have been here waiting for us, not as charity gifts from any organization, but as our right in return for our order of our services. It is the AMERICAN for us now, more than ever before."

It was this M Company recruit who passed me the following written resolution:

Whereas, it is the sense of the men of our company that the AMERICAN is the friend of the soldier, and has accomplished tremendous good for the boys in camp, that it brought forcibly to the attention of the people and the government that we rookies were being treated as paupers and beasts, and that as a result of the camp articles published in the AMERICAN pointing out our needs, many of our wants are filled.

Resolved, that in view of the AMERICAN'S friendship for us, we hereby extend our heartfelt thanks to it, and particularly to Mr. William Randolph Hearst for championing our cause and for conducting so fearless a newspaper.

Thousands of visitors to the camp scurried in all directions during the day equal. The recruits showed their infantry to the women and girls whom were in white chiffon waists and white duck skirts, by inviting them to the shelter of their tents. The First Corps of Cadets were as generous as the recruits in offering fulgence on soldier and visitor and dried up the field.

TEN THOUSAND VISITORS.

There was fun and amusement for the visitors, who numbered at least 10,000, watching the rookies go through active and floundering in company streets. Games of all sorts were played and enjoyment reigned supreme. Everybody appeared happy, particularly rookies who wore Uncle Sam's uniform for the first time.

Sweethearts met their soldier boys and maybe they didn't spin yarns about old scouts and the like. The girls brought bags of delicacies. But there was a little sadness in camp, due to the inefficiency that left some of the rookies without complete uniforms. The girl friends of these embryo soldiers sympathized with them and promised to use all their influence to right something.

Some of Mayor Curley's Ward 17 constituents among the recruits are Henry Morley of Eustis street, Harry Denehy, George Ramsey, who used to have a club of his own in Magazine street and who became famous as the campaign of "Don" O'Connell by riding a horse into a thirst quenching establishment in "Jim" Twomey's bailiwick; Tim Bannon, "Pike" O'Neil, Thomas Turley, Chester Gait, John Mattle and "Private" Smith. All would like to have Teddy Glynn, president of the Tammany Club of Ward 17, get them a leave of absence to enjoy the "Curley flag raising and ice cream fest" in Roxbury this evening.

"Dewdrop Inn" was the sign posted over the tent of K Company, Ninth Regiment, which made a hit with the visitors. And many of them "did drop in" during the afternoon.

Many recruits yesterday were inoculated with typhoid virus and an order was issued forbidding bathing in any of the nearby streams.

"Hi, heavy, here's the frog pond artillery," yelled a group of visitors from Roxbury when they caught sight of rookies from their section. The "frog pond artillery" was pumphandled by the visitors who left each recruit of the "artillery" ammunition from a retail store in Boston.

"Look at Sketch Morrison," shrilled a dainty princess from Somerville. "Sketch" and the young woman exchanged school-day compliments to the envy of his "bunkies" who never ever suspected him.

Tracey's Commonwealth band gave a concert of patriotic music during the day and evening. The Sixth Regiment band headed 500 Catholic recruits to St. Stephen's Church, where mass was celebrated by the Rev. David Heffernan. The band played church music and later in the evening played for the dress parade of the First Corps Cadets, and again when the retreat call was sounded and the flag lowered.

Storm Does Damage in New Hampshire Camp.

Concord, N. H., July 3.—The New Hampshire militiamen to the number of six hundred or so, encamped here, fought their first battle when an electrical storm swept over the camp.

Like the British fleet in the North Sea battle, they lost heavily, but held the battle field after the engagement.

The electrical storm was accompanied by a tremendous hail and rain storm. Every tent was flattened, and lightning struck a telephone wire, several men being knocked down by the shock.

Three days' rations were destroyed. Seven inches of water stood over much of the campground when the rain slackened.

RIFLES OF NINTH EMPTY

By BERT FORD.

With the Bay State Brigade, in Camp at El Paso, July 3.—Young men hurriedly drawn from every branch of civic life in Boston and Massachusetts students, draughtsmen, grocery clerks, mechanics and professional men, will celebrate the "Night before the Fourth" by guarding outpost duty along the Rio Grande, 2,650 miles from home and patrolling a cactus-strewn desert exposed to Mexican snipers.

The lads who were swamped with visitors and speeded with blessings at Framingham a week ago are today encamped in a barren region within sight of the Mexican capital. They can see the mounted scouts of Carranza and the sentinels afoot. They are also observing the points of regulars in a temperature of 105 degrees so well that old army officers here have put themselves out to praise the National Guard from the Bay State.

Only those who have seen the Second Massachusetts Brigade both at Framingham and the old Cotton Camp at the eastern outskirts of El Paso can appreciate the transformation. The men of the Seventh and the Twenty-third Regiments, regulars, posted on the flanks of the Massachusetts units, said they were surprised to see the splendidly equipped soldiers that Massachusetts had turned out.

REGULARS IMPRESSED.

The regulars, long guardians of this border city, were so impressed with Brigadier-General Warren Sweetser's command that they pitched in and helped the citizen-soldiers dig latrines and incinerator trenches the very first mess. The officers entertained the militia officers. One army officer remarked that he thought the "Boston outfit would be a lot of smoke," but admitted that they were regular fellows. A warm friendship was formed at once between volunteers and regulars.

The Bay State troops were given a taste of regular army discipline and routine in coming to the border. Although fagged and train weary after five days of riding, they could not be detrained at night and pitched pup tents or slept curled in blankets on the ground under desert stars.

They spent a sizzling Sabbath putting the camp into shape and at night bedded on their bunks exhausted and sunburnt, but proud soldiers and ready for what may come.

That the Bay State boys have the necessary stamina was proved to the satisfaction of military experts here within the first twenty-four hours. Take as example the demonstration of the first cosmopolitan company of the Third Battalion of the Ninth Regiment, under Major John K. Barry, fifty minutes after detraining.

Under orders from Fort Bliss, the Ninth Regiment, under Colonel Gilbert L. Hall, and the New England regiment to mobilize on the border, are equipped for duty on outposts along the Rio Grande a distance of 1,000 yards, between the outposts of the Seventh Regiment on the left and the Twenty-third Regiment on the right, the latter regular troops.

ON AND WITH EMPTY RIFLES.

These outposts were drawn from Major Barry's command, the first battalion in camp. Major Barry's choice for this thrilling service was Lieutenant Daniel J. Canty of Company E. Lieutenant Canty served and was wounded in the Philippine campaigns. He is assistant military instructor in the Boston high schools under Inspector-General Benyon. "Dan" Canty is a lean, wiry young fellow, with a wife and young children behind him in Boston, but he knows the military game.

He had been on duty all day on the train. His tour ended at dusk Saturday, but Canty was game. He seized the chance to plant the first outpost and with sixteen men made up of squads from Companies B, E, K and I watched the Mexican lines all night and until 8 Monday night without a cartridge in the outfit. When relieved by new crews—let Lieutenant Canty tell it:

It was dark when we started out. None of us knew anything about where we were going, other than a brief description that we were encamped on what used to be the old bed of the Rio Grande, but that the river had formed a horseshoe peninsula and that it was up to us to guard it.

Regulars told us the bushes there ended our ride, and that a barbed wire fence was beyond, and that on the opposite bank were cotton fields where Mexicans with bad reputations nightly assembled. We could hear the low, cossack groups where one man goes forward every possible inch and we detailed four of my three others concealed and ready to act and to order relief after the outpost is tired.

HEARD SHOTS FIRED.

We could hear the Mexicans talking on the other side and through the night at least a dozen shots were fired, but not toward our side. They seemed to be celebrating fiesta day by sent up Roman candles. But the stretch we guarded was the very spot where a sergeant from the Seventh was shot and killed from ambush a few days ago while attempting to round up a couple of mules.

Nothing worth while started until 3:30 a. m. the morning when No. 4 challenged and sounded a warning. I hurried to the spot to find a surly greaser trying to break through our lines. I told him he must go back and he asked me what I would stop him with I told him in Spanish, picked up on the Islands, that I could stop him very quickly with my bare knuckles if he didn't obey. He retreated with an oath.

Major John J. Barry's Third Battalion of the Ninth was the first infantry unit to reach El Paso, pulling into the stockyard at 8:55 Saturday afternoon.

Camp Whitney Recruits Thank the American

Members of Company M, Second Provisional Regiment at Camp Whitney, have adopted the following resolutions thanking the AMERICAN and Mr. Hearst for bringing about needed changes in conditions at the camp:

Whereas, it is the sense of the men of Company M that the AMERICAN is the friend of the soldier, in that it has accomplished tremendous good for the boys in camp; that it brought forcibly to the attention of the people and the government that we rookies were being treated as paupers and beasts, and that as a result of the camp articles published in the AMERICAN pointing out our needs, many of our wants are filled;

Resolved, That in view of the AMERICAN'S friendship for us, we hereby extend our heartfelt thanks to it, and particularly to Mr. William Randolph Hearst for championing our cause and for conducting so fearless a newspaper.

EIGHTH NOW IN CAMP AT THE BORDER

By HARRY BENWELL.

El Paso, Texas, July 3.—With the arrival today of the Eighth Massachusetts Infantry all the Bay State units are now on the border except the cavalry, which has been ordered to hasten to Columbus.

The Eighth Regiment has been assigned to a site between the Ninth and Fifth Massachusetts Infantry at Camp Cotton, a mile from the city. The Bay state artillery, Batteries A, B and C with artillery, Major Miles Sunday afternoon is stationed on Morningside Heights, six miles from El Paso.

The ambulance and signal corps and field hospital are stationed in the slopes of Mt. Franklin overlooking Juarez.

The national guard from Massachusetts brought all equipment but horses on the trains that carried the different organizations. This pleased the veterans here and stirred favorable comment all along the line.

STOLE A MARCH.

The Eighth and the Bay State troops stole a march on the other militia units from other States including New York, where national guard was rushed to the border without any equipment save what the men wore. When the Massachusetts troops get here they will be ready for any eventualities.

Judging from rumors something is likely to crack any hour. The situation is tense, so tense that guests at the Hotel Del Norte, the leading hotel here have been instructed to hurry to the basement at the first sound of shooting and the women guests have been told to flee to the barber shop, which is considered about as safe as a hurricane cellar vault.

For many days the Mexicans at Juarez have been boasting that the tall buildings in El Paso would be their first targets.

CONGRESS TO END AUG. 20, SAYS KERN

Washington, July 3.—Senator Kern of Indiana, Democratic leader in the Senate, following half an hour's conference with President Wilson today about the administration's legislative program, predicted that Congress would adjourn on August 20. "I had thought Congress would be in session until September 1, but now feel that we can adjourn ten days earlier," Senator Kern said.

RHODE ISLAND UNIT PASSES CHICAGO

Chicago, July 3.—Battery A of the Rhode Island National Guard passed through Chicago early today en route to the border. There were twenty-four cars in the train. Most of the guardsmen were asleep and few availed themselves of the opportunity of stretching their legs during the hour and a half there were here.

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time In Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weakness? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many who have eyes weak from infancy have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyesight is better than it has been for years. I can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any good druggist and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times a day. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been helped if they had cared for their eyes in time. Be careful not to allow any of this solution to get into the eyes as it is a powerful drug. Can almost every family."

COLUMBUS GUARDED BY 2ND

The Second Massachusetts Infantry is encamped today at the little town of Columbus, New Mexico, the scene of the Villa raid which started the trouble.

Although the United States is not yet at war, the censorship is strict.

Not satisfied with chopping out 225 words bodily from William H. Davis' dispatch, the censor, "W. H. Dmore," even tried his own hand at writing the message. The signature to the story is Davis' but every mention of individuals in the Second Regiment has been carefully blue pencilled.

By WILLARD H. DAVIS.

Columbus Base Camp, Columbus, N. M., July 2—1255 words deleted by censor. Lead written by censor "W. H. Dmore). Massachusetts troops reached border today. Tonight the boys are sleeping in a camp on the desert. They are sleeping on ground. Stepping from their tents in the morning the boys can easily see the border line with its portico on duty night and day.

The boys, as they outlined and marched into camp, were greeted with cheers from the regulars. Despite the fact that the thermometer registered at just 120 degrees, together with the dust that prevails in this desolate land, the boys marched with their heads up, all in unison, to their camp site. (Sic!)

TWO MEN SUNSTRICKEN.

Worcester, Holyoke, Greenfield, Fitchburg, Adams and North Adams and from other cities and towns in the Berkshires make up the heart of this contingent. They are a sturdy looking lot and their appearance as they broke into the "City of Tents" created much favorable comment from the regulars stationed here.

Owing to the intensity of the heat so unlike the atmosphere of the hills of Western Massachusetts, several of the boys had to be treated for slight prostrations. Two of them dropped as they detrained.

A hot wind sweeps over the camp, coupled with a choking dust, making it difficult to breathe and causing great dryness in the throat. It is a land void of any vegetation. As far as the eye can reach there is nothing but sage brush, cactus and barren mountains.

The town itself is a rude affair. The buildings, such as they are, are one story in height. The worst part of it is the highest thing in town. Immediately upon arrival the men pitched their "Pup" tents, the cook tents were "set up," and a supper of beans was literally "guiped" down by the lads.

175 more words deleted. The censor said: "It is dangerous to print any military information of value gets into hands of the unfriendly. I shall not prevent your writing about the habits of these boys, back home in Massachusetts, but to their relatives and how nicely they are situated and all the nice things they want to know."

The men had a treat in the band concert by one of the seven bands situated at the camp. This is the order each night. It is indeed strange to be seated on the hot sands of a desolate desert, listening to a band playing the classics and stirring military airs.

SHIVER AT LIZARDS.

The boys attended religious services aboard the troop train this morning. I just strolled down through the company streets and found excited groups hustling here and there. Investigation showed that the lads had been assigned a site in the "mesquite" bushes which are infested with lizards and toads. Some one had spied a swiftly moving lizard and believed it to be a scorpion. Up went the cry and for awhile "things" were doing.

The boys don't relish having a lizard crawl over them, as they say, but the regulars just laugh at them and say: "Partner, they won't bite. They're more afraid of you than you are. Don't mind a little thing like a lizard running."

FIREWORKS DISPLAY AT BRAVES FIELD

Immediately after tomorrow afternoon's holiday game at Braves Field a big gang of workmen will install hundreds of set pieces, which are to be used in connection with the display of fireworks at Braves Field tomorrow night.

With no fireworks on the Common or other municipal parks this year, the Braves Field display will be the only large show of fireworks to be made in Boston or vicinity.

In all $2500 worth of pyrotechnics will be displayed. The fireworks at 9:15 will be prefaced by a concert at 7:30 by Palidino's Military Band.

A Film Drama of Marvelous Power and Romantic Charm

"The Mysteries of Myra" radiates the breath of romance—a romance of two worlds. It pictures with appealing beauty the golden days of love and youth, glorified by a sunshine from within which endures under the shadows that fall across the path of love.

Coming at a time when picture play lovers were tiring of "thrillers" in which thousands of dollars had been spent to produce a fleeting and artificial emotion, "The Mysteries of Myra" was welcomed with genuine surprise and delight—surprise that so new and so different a conception had never been thought of before, and delight in new found dramatic power—the power of an idea that has already set the motion picture on higher levels of thought and interest.

Yet "The Mysteries of Myra" is thrilling—but it has a new kind of delightful thrill that completely lifts you out of the every day world and leaves you under an indescribable spell of fascination.

The speaking stage could not present the interplay of subtle forces that weave in and out of the lives in "The Mysteries of Myra." The sensitive camera makes vivid—startling—the delicate but powerful influences shaping and reshaping their destinies.

FAMILIES FLEE SOMERVILLE BLAZE

The East Somerville station of the Boston & Maine Railroad was threatened, several families were driven out, and the entire section of Charlestown, close to the Somerville line, was endangered by a two-alarm fire which started in the two and a half story wooden structure at No. 59 Cambridge street, Charlestown, early today.

The building is occupied by Hawley, Harlow & Hamlin, Inc., and Nathan Tufts & Sons, dealers in feed and grain, and the loss, as estimated by District Chief Shallow, will exceed $25,000. The fire was discovered by Patrolman Montague of the Charlestown station.

Upon the arrival of District Chief MacDonald, another alarm was sounded, which brought Somerville engines to the scene. The fire, eating its way through the flimsy building, got a strong foothold before the second alarm engines had arrived.

East Boston Man Fined $100 for Insulting Flag

Santo Sagone, thirty-three years old, and married, was fined $100 by Judges Barnes in the East Boston Police Court today for desecrating the United States flag. He appealed and was held in $500 for the Grand Jury.

According to Sergeant Louis Lutz and Patrolman Thomas J. Walsh, they found that an American flag was being used as a clothespin bag by the arrested man. The officers testified that they were passing through Everett street last Thursday, when they noticed an American flag sewed into a clothespin bag, hanging from a clothesline at No. 94 Everett street. The officers entered the house and found Sagona there.

The officers testified that they asked Sagone if he did not think it an insult to the American flag and that he said that he did not. Walsh asked him if it would not be an insult to the Italian flag if it was made into a clothespin bag, and they assert that Sagone said it would be.

Today Sagone told the court that his boy had found the flag and brought it home, already sewed up into a bag. Judge Barnes asked him how long he had been in this country and Sagone told him seven years and also that he was not a citizen.

Mrs. Proctor Blames Mrs. Jack Gardner

husband and others went to a theatre.

That when the husband and his benefactress found out the wife could understand French, they changed their conversations from French into Italian.

That at first Mrs. Gardner opposed Proctor's marriage, wishing him to devote himself solely to his art.

After telling of these things Mrs. Proctor then paid tribute to Mrs. Gardner's qualities, which have made and kept her a social arbiter for so long a time. The tribute of the young wife follows:

"I liked Mrs. Gardner. She had a wonderful personality.

"When she spoke and when she looked at me I felt it useless to resist her. I have seen her enter a room full of handsome men and beautiful women and within three minutes Mrs. Gardner, splendid at the age of sixty-nine, to which she freely confessed, would be surrounded by every man in the room, so great is her personal power and charm."

Of her husband Mrs. Proctor, who is now living with her grandparents at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., speaks partly in praise. She says also that she will not contest his divorce suit. She makes these points against him:

She never knew he could play golf.

He knows nothing of baseball, tennis or croquet.

All he can play is the piano.

She says she left him for good and sufficient reasons.

His dependence on Mrs. Gardner was one of the things that made the wife desert him.

But on the other hand Mrs. Proctor has things to say in her husband's favor. She says:

He is a very efficient teacher.

She hopes he will be happy.

She may send some of her own pupils (she is now a music teacher) to Boston to study under Proctor.

He plays wonderfully well.

But, says Mrs. Proctor, she will keep an eye on the pupils she sends to Boston and she explains why thus:

"Of course, some of the girls I send to Boston shall walk open-eyed into such a trap as I did. They will have my expert guidance."

"Meanwhile I hope my husband will be happy in his rejuvenated bachelor condition, and I shall try to find happiness far away from Fenway Court, thank goodness."

Fenway Court is Mrs. Gardner's Venetian palace in the Back Bay.

Mrs. Proctor tells of signing away her dower rights without knowing what it really meant to her. However, an arrangement will be made whereby she will be cared for. The details of this arrangement are said to be unusual.

Of her romance with the pianist the young wife has this to say:

"I can't help thinking how by chance I wedded Mr. Proctor. I was a student in the hospital ill with diphtheria. Mr. Proctor came to see me, brought me flowers, just as he would have done to any other pupil. But I was ill a long time—the flowers came more constantly, if possible, and before I knew it I was to become his wife.

"I heard from him afterwards that at the time Mrs. Gardner did not like his plans, wishing that he would devote himself solely to his music and to continue to pursue his studies at Fenway Court under the advantages offered by Mrs. Gardner's musical treasures.

"But he persisted. I met Mrs. Gardner some two weeks before we were married. After that I saw her more often.

"As for my husband, I saw but little of him. He spent most of his time, when not teaching, with others. Once I was locked into a room—actually locked in—while he and others went to a theatre. I had, and still have, doubts as to whether he went to the theatre at all."

"My reasons for leaving my husband are my own, if you please. Now, I just want to live unmolested. I just want to teach and to forget."

The wife's story throws the first light on her love match, on her wedding in Mrs. Gardner's palace, on her life in the home Mrs. Gardner presented Proctor and then of the sudden departure of the young wife from her husband's home in December, 1911. Society has always been keenly interested, but up to the present time the details had remained secret.

Asked if Mrs. Gardner had ever been rude to her, the wife said in reply:

"I'd rather not go into those details. True, she used to speak in French. When she and Mr. Proctor found out I knew a little French, they began to converse in Italian.

Yacht Card for Fourth Puritan Cup Big Event

Practically every yacht club along the Massachusetts coast has races scheduled for tomorrow. The big event of the day is the Puritan Cup race off Marblehead, which will be given by the Eastern Yacht Club. This race is for the "big fellow" and should afford a beautiful sight.

Due to her recent fine work 1; the Newport to Marblehead ocean race, the Vagrant is the favorite, but the Vanderbilt schooner will receive plenty of competition from such speedy craft as the Timandra, Virginia, Iroilta, Alice and Whileaway.

The three New York 40's will also compete, and judging from what they displayed Saturday, should make things interesting. The Squaw, owned by J. S. Lawrence, is an especially fast sloop in heavy weather and the same can be said of the Shawara and the Katherine. All the Eastern Yacht Club "P" boats and Bar Harbors will start in the third division.

NORTH SHORE BOATS BUSY.

The annual Fourth of July regatta of the Corinthian Yacht Club will attract all the North Shore boats and it is freely predicted these races will have the largest number of entries of the season.

The following classes will start: M. N. Q, R. Bar Harbor thirty-one-footers, Marblehead seventeen-footers, Manchester Yacht Club seventeen-footers, Corinthian Yacht Club fifteen-footers, Marblehead racing dories, Beachcomber dories, Alpha dories, handicap under sixteen-feet waterline and Pleon Yacht Club boats.

In all the classes but the last five the racing will count for both club and North Shore championships.

CITY OF BOSTON RACES.

The City of Boston regatta, which will be sailed tomorrow afternoon, starting at 1 o'clock, under the auspices of the Yacht Club Union of Massachusetts, will be held over the South Boston Yacht Club course off Marine Park. The racing will count for the Y. R. U. championships, excepting in the dory and power boat classes.

The race is open to all yachts and entries should be made to Howard Gannett, secretary of the Y. R. U., South Boston Yacht Club.

Ocean Race Ends by Both Boats Withdrawing

Marblehead, July 3.—The ocean race of the Eastern Yacht Club for the Vanderbilt gold cup, from Newport to this port, was declared off by the committee at noon yesterday, as both of the schooners that started from Newport Saturday morning had withdrawn from the race.

This resulted from the loss of both topmasts by L. E. Crofoot's schooner Virginia, while near Great Round Shoal Lightship.

At this time the Vagrant, owned by Harold S. Vanderbilt, was at least three miles in the lead, but her owner, owing to the accident on the Virginia, decided to withdraw from the race, as he did not want to be the lone finisher in a race for the trophy offered by himself.

SOCCER STAR NOT GOING.

New York, July 3.—Harry Shanholt, for the past two years captain of the Columbia University soccer team and picked on the American team for the tour of Norway and Sweden next month, has decided to remain in New York for the purpose of pursuing his studies.

No Camp for Curtis Yale Men Now Smile

When Yale's chubby football captain, "Kewpie" Black, gets a glimpse of the following article he will gather what kindred Eli spirits he can find about old New York town and drink a bumper toast to the permanent removal from vacation camp life of Sidney Curtis, '05, the man commonly reported as being responsible for the entrance into Harvard of Charles E. Brickley, the world's best-known drop kicker; Edward W. Mahan, football's finest halfback; Captain William J. Bingham of the Harvard track team, and numberless other youths who have either made a name for themselves in Harvard athletics or in the domain of study.

Drinking a toast to Curtis's retirement is no new act for the Yale gridiron leader. Last year in the early Spring, "Cupid" received a premature report that Curtis had decided to abandon his famous Summer vacation camp which was a mobilizing point for college athletes and especially promising youths of muscle, who eventually went their way to uplift collegiate sport at Harvard. Black at that time in a New Haven hotel called about him his friends and drank a rousing toast to the retirement of this active Harvard alumnus. Curtis by chance was in New Haven, and hearing of Black's round of drinks joined his party and he, too, drank to his continued health outside the Summer camp industry. Then Curtis turned about on the next train that Yale men heard of the Crimson graduate was that he had reopened his vacation camp in Maine, so their enthusiastic reception of his reported retirement went for naught.

DEEDS SPEAK LOUDLY.

Yale men, however, can now safely hold aloft their cups in a toast, for Sid Curtis for the first time in several Summers is not now actively engaged in running a vacation camp.

Now Sid Curtis would be very apt to deny that he has been solely responsible for the recruiting of some of football's greatest prep school wizards for his Alma Mater. But tell you that so-and-so and this-or-that man already had a spark or two of electric football genius, that Summer or two in his camp just fanned it into a nourishing flame. But deeds speak louder than words and the following paragraphs are set forth from what Yale and Princeton men claim to know of the situation and what many Harvard men themselves will acknowledge.

CONCERNING BRICKLEY.

One of Curtis's best catches was Charley Brickley. Brickley had made a wonderful reputation both at Everett High and Exeter Academy as a football player especially. Report for a time had Charley going to Princeton while Yale folks thought the great "Scrofoot" was pointed towards the haven of the Elis. A Summer with Curtis, intertwined with winning the thousand dollar Teachemacher scholarship for Harvard at Exeter was the first step in the writing of Harvard's subsequent wonderful football history. Brickley entered Harvard and his great record during his four years made his name a household world the world over.

"Curtis did it," wailed Yale and Princeton men, the country over, but the Harvard men declared that he was running his camp for whom ever cared to enter it and that he was hiring capable councillors to keep it right side up. Brickley was one of these councillors.

THEN CAME MAHAN.

About a year after Brickley entered Harvard, Mahan was ready to throw off the prep school yoke and the Andover all-around athlete was the shining mark at which many a college alumnus aimed his alluring shafts. Yale men for years have used Andover as a nesting place for its athletic chicks, so very natural it was that Mahan should feel the ardor of the remainder of the brood.

Yale men in New Haven will even now point out to one who asks them a house where they say Mahan engaged his room for freshman year at New Haven. Their joy at receiving such an athletic find as the Natick football and baseball wizard was turned to sorrow when Mahan was found, bag and baggage, at Cambridge in September, 1912, a sure enough Harvard disciple. Who caused the Natick youth to change his mind? He spent the preceding Summer and one or two since at Curtis' New Hampshire camp. Enough said! Curtis, however, declares that Mahan always intended to enter Harvard, and that as far as he was concerned his interest in the matter went little beyond being a close friend of Eddie's in camp life.

BINGHAM JOINS HARVARD.

Billie Bingham, Harvard's track captain, was also claimed by other colleges than Harvard, but came to Cambridge. His brother Bob subsequently has gone to Yale, and Frank, just graduated, is planning on making Princeton his alma mater.

Tom Enwright, of whom great things were expected in Harvard athletics, but whom a more or less stormy stay in college suffering from scholastic troubles has prevented from showing his true athletic worth, was another of Curtis' waifs. Enwright took entrance examinations for Yale; he also was dined by Pennsylvania alumni in Philadelphia, and Princeton men looked for him to become an inmate of the Tiger lair. Enwright finally bobbed up in Cambridge. There are others who have come under the brotherly care, good fellowship and silver tongue of winning Sid Curtis and have entered Harvard, but space forbids enumerating them.

But Curtis, now enlisted in the general advertising business, is out of camp life for good, he says, so Yale men and Princeton men have good cause to rejoice. What will be the cost to Harvard athletics, anxiously ask followers of the Crimson. Time will only tell. But listen, Yale men! The Curtis camp at Ashland, N. H., was owned by a Yale alumnus. The joke apparently seems to have been on the Elis at whatever angle you look at it from.

BOXING BRIEFS AND GOSSIP

It is on the cards, it is pretty well understood, for Charley White, the clever Chicago lightweight, and Matt Wells, the venerable and gamey wolf dope for Brighton, to come together in the main melee on the Arena's boxing card July 11. There was nothing doing last Tuesday night because Jack Britton cannot be his date with Joe Welling, while the building is to be dark again tomorrow night owing to Miss Murray and his conferees deeming it advisable to duck the holiday.

Is the White-Wells match cold? It was as cold as anything could be for Boston immediately after "Young Nick Charles" White discerned old Matt far enough in front of the noted mauvaise to declare him the victor in his homered and tongue battle with the New Lewis entrant at the Hippodrome early in the Winter. Wells put up a stupendously brilliant battle against White. It was close, sizzling close. A new verdict would have been about proper, and Wells got absolutely all that was coming to him when he was proclaimed the winner.

Right then a return battle would have formed a particularly choice, ditto well-nourishing attraction. White, naturally, wanted another crack at Wells, while the fans were clamoring for another battle between the two boys. The Triple A management knew a good thing at a sure number, and while it was considered as good as built, something happened and it fell through.

Since their Boston meeting White has peppered Wells twice, to Cincinnati they went ten fairly even rounds, though White drew the gate towards, while in Kansas City, ranking over the Derby distance of fifteen rounds, it was all White, with Charley gaining the referee's decision.

That miserable roadhouser ear; that badly decked peabody and the rest of the bruised gallant old Matt is carrying around, were put on him by White, his "victim" here, so ruled "New York Charley" White. Wells didn't show much when on with Eddie Murphy at the Arena early in the Summer, while he gave every evidence of having reached the end of his string when he met Johnny Dundee, the New York Scotch Wop, some six weeks ago.

Incidentally, here's a good place to insert that Frankie Mack of Beachmont, a 104-pound youth who would doubtless be one of Grantz' Boston's particular ring idols today if ever given a chance to meet some other foe but Walter Bentley, administered quite a sound trouncing to Wells at Rochester, N. Y., in late May. It was flashed out of that town that Mack and Wells had boxed to a draw, but Frankie brought back to Boston the press clippings and every "story" had him pictured the winner.

The boxing fans will pull hard for the best in matchmaking when White and Wells square off a week from tomorrow night, providing that's the attraction the Arena is going to put on. White has done but little work this Summer. He worried Welsh here, has been on since his Rochester engagement with Mack. The White-Wells battle will probably be about the big noise of the Winter season. But has the match grown cold? The fight itself and the house it attracts will tell.

The Commercial A. C., after staging several atrocious lemons in a row, put on a corking good show last Friday night and Matchmaker George Freeman is confident he is coming back with another lollapalooza. It's to be Terry Brooks, the hard-hitting star of the Edwards Mack stable, against "Yank" O'Brien, who is either a phenom or a misfit, in the main go.

O'Brien made a lot of noise when he started his busy Boston career going a few months ago. But his bout with Dave Powers at the Arena wasn't relished by his admirers. Still, "Yank" has oft declared he wasn't himself that night and will make good in his next start. In Brooks, O'Brien will meet a rough little battler, and, if "Yank" works along expected lines, makes a stand-up, slam-bang affair of it, the loser should be mighty badly smeared up.

H. J. Leary of No. 25 Raymond street, Allston, is out with a sweeping defi to all the New England 130 and 120-pounders on behalf of Tony Vatlas of Brighton, a former National champion in the amateurs, who has batted at a 1000 clip since joining the professionals. "Red" Kelly and Jimmy Varnes are among Vatlas's victims. Leary has an unmistakably good boy and would like Tony well to the fore, especially when the kid puts on a little more weight and becomes an out-and-out featherweight.

To a big extent it will be a safe and sane Fourth in Lynn, but The East will be without a single important battle. Lightweights will figure in three big bouts in the West and two of the attractions come under the head of regular stuff.

The Elks of East Chicago are to shoot Johnny Dundee and Ever Hammer. The latter is the crack young Windy City battler, who, after mussing up Joe Welling, gave Freddie Welsh a sure-enough, hope-to-die trimming. But unfortunately Hammer and Welsh met in a ten-round no-decision affair at Milwaukee. Hence, the title didn't change hands. Matt Hinkel of Cleveland, who refereed the Dillon-Moran quarrel, is to handle the Dundee-Hammer mixup.

Charley White and Johnny Griffiths, two topliners and big Boston favorites, are to get busy at Canton, O. The promoters have had a hard time bringing them together, White will give away quite a bunch of weight, but is confident he will be bracketed.

Out at Denver Freddie Welsh is to box old Al Wolgast. They are to step fifteen rounds. It seems little short of a sin and a shame to have made this match as Al is all in and there's a whole lot of sound young Americans the talent would like to see on with Welsh by a commodity where decisions are allowed.

Jack Dillon will also be seen in action, Dillon's conqueror tackles old Jim Flynn at Newark, Ohio. Here's another very sad appearing match though it will doubtless attract a host.

YOU'D feel proud of yourself if you were a tire manufacturer who made a tire having all these qualities:

ECONOMY—Long life; consistent extra-mileage; right price.

SAFETY—Indented tread, to give a permanent non-skid grip on the road as long as the tire lasts.

COMFORT—As smooth and pleasant riding as on any smooth-tread tire.

APPEARANCE — Attractive; up-to-date.

The DELION TIRE makers claim all these points for their tire, and I must say that its PERFORMANCE among my customers consistently bears out all the claims.

You can better pass judgment yourself, after you've run well over the 5000-mile Guaranty distance.

Incidentally, I am in an unusual position to take a good deal of tire bother off your shoulders — thanks to my representing one manufacturer instead of a dozen. I can make you pretty nearly forget tire troubles.

NOW FOR THE BIG SERIES

Champions of National League and Climbing Braves Have Games That Mean Much.

By JOHN W. MORAN, JR.

Brigadier-General Pat Moran led Philadelphia brigade into Boston late yesterday, and this morning they are bivouacked out in the Back Bay ready to advance on the horde of Stallings. The Patmorans, last year's winners of the National League pennant, are here for four games in three days with the pack that is barking at their heels for second position in the race.

Six points separate the two teams in the fight for second position, and a majority of wins in the four battles to come will give either of the teams a strangle hold on second place at the start of the second Western trip. Likewise whichever team wins a majority will come mighty close to gaining the top, that is, of course, providing that the Giants land on the Robins as has been predicted.

LOOKS LIKE RUELBACH.

It's mighty hard telling just who Stallings will start against the Phillies today. Likewise it's hard figuring out who will work for the visitors. One thing that seems practically certain is that a right-hander will work for the Braves. If Rudolph be in any kind of shape he may draw the task. Otherwise it would appear as though Ed Ruelbach would be the man. Inasmuch as Barnes pitched Friday against Brooklyn, it doesn't seem as though he is due to start just yet.

Eppa Jepthia Rixey and Charles Albert Bender seem about due to work, and it wouldn't be surprising if either one of them drew down the task in today's game. Chances would favor saving Alexander for the holiday afternoon game, with Stallings holding Jess Barnes out to oppose him. Should Rixey work this afternoon Bender will probably draw the forenoon assignment for July 4, with either Nehf or Tyler opposing him.

Early this Spring Stallings announced that it was his intention to get the Braves away from the barrier as fast as possible. Failing in that, he announced he would have the team jumping along toward the month of June and keep it right on the leap during July and August, with the idea in view of heading off the pack when the middle of the latter month came along.

The early performances of the Boston bunch caused a great many of its followers to fear Stallings couldn't make good in his predictions. As the club continued in a hitting slump, and lost game after game by one run, these quackers grew more bold. They couldn't see the club at all, but today their vision has been somewhat improved upon, and once more a great many of them are predicting big things for the team.

BRAVES GOING ON HIGH.

When one considers that of the last fourteen games played, that is, since the team left home June 18 and up to and including Saturday, ten Were won and the other four lost by that same one run margin, he can readily understand why some of the faithful have felt continually that the club would land the goonion this season.

While it is true the club hasn't started any great hitting streak, it is likewise true the players have started to hit at the opportune moment.

Men like Magee, Konetchy, Smith, Snodgrass and Gowdy are hitting when hits mean runs. They hit in unison and ably support the top of the list, which is managing to get on base with regularity. Since the club returned home to face the league-leading Dodgers they have lost two games that really seemed criminal in connection with the loss of them—games much has been said regarding the sort of umpiring.

UMPIRING HAS BEEN BAD.

While the writer doesn't believe it best to continually ride the umpires he does agree with the Braves in some of their kicks regarding the "breaks" that came their way Wednesday and Thursday. Several times strikes were called which otherwise should have been noted as fourth balls. Had the fourth ball been given and a base runner put on first there is no telling what might have happened. It is just as possible as not that runs would have resulted and Boston would have one or two more games credited to them.

Today President John Kinley Tener of the National League will in all probability be among those present at the game with the Phillies. He will have ample opportunity to witness the work of the "umps" he assigns to the games. It was recently announced he would go around the circuit and see his indicator-handlers at work for himself.

TENER TO MAKE ROUNDS.

It would appear as though such a plan would be more beneficial to him than to have Secretary Leroy Reeves chasing about and forwarding in reports from time to time which are reputed to not always be based on fact. Possibly if Tener goes about it by himself and takes some action in cases where action seems due, the league might escape so keen an investigation as the Pennsylvania League.

As Boston fans well know, the Braves' pitching is about the classiest in the old league at the present time. Every man on the hurling squad, with the possible exception of Rudolph, is right in top form. Rudolph is about ready, and it wouldn't be surprising if he were in the box during the series with the Phillies that starts today.

Pete Compton, whose release to the Louisville (American Association) club, was announced a few days ago, will not, at the present time, go down. It appears that one National League club, reputed to be Pittsburgh, refused to waive claim to Pete, and consequently he will remain either the property of Boston or join the Pirates.

COMPTON NO FALSE ALARM.

Compton is an accomplished ball player, who has been in a bad slump of late, and who seems due to get out of it and to play the sort of ball he is really capable of for long.

On the whole, the Braves are playing a much improved article of ball the sort of ball they played while in Florida in the Spring, and which caused the scribes to predict wonderful things for them. One who saw them run bases in Saturday's double-header would leave Braves Field fairly enamored of them.

Mahan Is Hurt in First Game With "Pros"

Waterbury, Ct., July 2.—Eddie Mahan, Harvard's noted football and baseball star, who was graduated last month and who pitched for the Colonials, Waterbury's crack semi-professional team, against the Worcester (Eastern League) club, here yesterday, thereby forfeiting his amateur standing, had the misfortune to have a finger on his right hand split in the first inning. Mahan held forth in left field the remainder of the game.

A general riot was narrowly averted in the seventh inning when Catcher Waters of the Colonials and Umpire Maloney came to blows. The fans swarmed on to the field, but the police drove them back and separated the two battlers before any great amount of damage was done. The Worcester team won the game, 5-3.

Altright pitching was in evidence throughout the Eastern League the last week. So effective did the boxmen work that six teams had their batting figures reduced.

Springfield, the kingpin slugging aggregation of the circuit, was no exception, losing five points, while Lynn and New London were also separated from a few markers in the percentage column.

Portland showed a steady hand, gaining three points and moving from fourth to third place by passing Worcester.

Springfield continues to play at big league style, leading the league in five distinct departments. The Green Sox in homerun swats, with fifteen, have scored the most runs and hits; fourth in third place by passing made the greatest number of extra bases; lead in two-base hits, with ninety-four, and are showing the way

RED SOX BATTLE MACKS

Series Embraces Four Games with Two Combats on Fourth; Carrigan Expects Clean-Up.

Philadelphia, July 3.—The Red Sox, with Bill Carrigan, their noted pilot, standing suspended as a result of last Friday's gay doings over in Washington, when Captain McBride of the Senators threw his bat at Pitcher Mays, alleging that the Boston hurler had intentionally tried to "bean" him, begin a four-game series with the mirthful Macks at Shibe Park this afternoon.

The Macks have not won a game since they bagged the next to the last combat in their recent five-game series over in Boston. The Yankees have just got through registering a clean sweep on the local lot, which is why Bill Donovan's warriors are cavorting out in the lead.

There will be one game with the Red Sox today, two tomorrow and one Wednesday. Then the Bostonians go home for their second stand against the four Western teams, opening on Thursday with Lee Fohl's spectacular Indians, who refuse to make good the claims of a big bunch of baseball dopesters and strike out for the bottom.

The Red Sox had a most disastrous stay in Washington. They not only lost their manager, as well as Catcher Agnew, who is said to have pummeled Clark Griffith, after the Senators' ruler got home the first blow, but dropped three games and scarcely took in enough money at the gate to pay their hotel bill and transportation.

Each one of the three weekday crowds failed to run as high as 2,000. Nor will the Red Sox play to any big gates here. Connie Mack has gone a-tinkering on his new club and the fans are not according him much patronage.

LETTUCE ALONE.

Time was when a golfer could talk us to death
With the long-drawn-out tales of his playing.
But now he is wantonly wasting his breath
For we never know what he is saying.
We nod in reply, with a smile in our eye
At the tale of the record he rended,
And sadly we say, "Isn't" with a sigh of distress,
And forget it before it is ended.
His tales about drivers and stymies and greens
No more have the power to get us,
Our favorite pest in the guy who grows beans,
Tomatoes, white turnips and lettuce.

As we understand it, the chief pleasure of an amateur gardener's life is the anticipation. When he plants a row of carrots he is kept awake nights wondering whether they will come up onions or spinach.

We don't know whether there is an American Gardening Association, but we know that goldern few amateur gardeners will ever be declared professionals.

Enthusiasm is plentiful in the U. S. A. as long as it doesn't cost anything.

SUSPICION.

"He smiled and shook my hand," he said,
"And then he up and hit me
And kicked me rudely on the head,
And butted, gouged and bit me.
"He calmly tells me we are friends
And then he cleats and spikes me,
And, from the way his actions trends,
I do not think he likes me."

These Fashionable Bathing Suits Are Reproduced Here by Special Arrangement with Good Housekeeping, the Nation's Greatest Home Magazine

From the June Number of Good Housekeeping.

This suit is of mohair, and in its trimness and becomingness to the figure the design rivals that of much more expensive suits. The collar and cuffs are of black and white mercerized poplin. To the right, a well-made model for conservative tastes.

Crisp taffeta with flaring skirts, soft satins with clinging lines, and wool jerseys, which make the most practical of swimming suits, play equally important parts in the Summer bathing suits, says, a writer in Good Housekeeping. Some models even go so far as to flounce themselves becomingly, while others more conservative in line have adopted the masculine pocket in the most inconsequential manner, for if ever there was a pocket where pockets are of little avail, it is in a bathing suit, yet here they are.

The cap, which is unquestionably the most comfortable head covering for the water, is no wrivalled by the brimmed hat, some narrow brims, but others a real sailor in shape.

Be the color of the bathing suit what it may—black, dark blue and deep plum, relieved by white, are the popular colors—the hat may be as daring as you please, and the stronger the color, usually the more effective. right greens, yellows, purples, and even rose, form the brimmed hats and the turban-like bandanna.

In Our Wonderful World

The Turks have allowed General Townshend to retain his sword—the same honor which the Russians paid to Sir William Fenwick Williams when he was compelled to surrender at Kars. The custom is not uncommon in modern history. When Lord Methuen was captured by Delarey his sword was given back to him, and he was released. The Spanish Admiral Cervera, who surrendered with no boots and very few clothes on, had managed to bring his sword on board Captain Bob Evans' ship, and he was allowed to carry it to a cabin that had been allotted to him. General Stoessel at Port Arthur kept his sword, and at Appomattox Courthouse General Grant allowed General Lee to retain his weapon. When Napoleon III surrendered at Sedan, Bismarck taunted him with the question: "What will you, Majesty, whose sword is this? Is it the sword of France or your own sword?"

If you put your arm overboard from a hydroplane running fifty miles an hour and strike a wave crest the probability is that you will break your arm or wrist. The reason is that at such a speed the water has not time to give, or even to change shape, and striking it is like striking some metal. If a swordsman should enter one of the great hydraulic quarries where a stream of water, under enormous head, is used to wash down hillsides, and attempts to cut into one of those streams, his sword would fly in pieces without being able to penetrate the water. The stream is like a bar of iron.

One doctor has stated that temporary insanity is a condition of double consciousness, not dissimilar to epilepsy. A person normally quite sane may have attacks of temporary aberration lasting little more than a few minutes, especially after long hours of hard, continuous mental work, being particularly liable if insomnia supervenes.

Crimes have been committed in the early morning, when the perpetrator has not really been properly awake and has been horrified to find what he has done. This is a true case of temporary insanity. But it is comparatively rare, and a man in normal health would not suffer in this way.

A specialist in mental disease has stated that he knew a case in which a person was insane during a certain time each day, and that others have been known when the patient was quite normal at ordinary times, but suffered from a temporary fit of mania regularly once a month.

De Witt Takes Vera's Cousin Off Canoeing During Her Absence

By ANN LISLE

Copyright, 1916, International News Service.

Supper that night was a gloomy affair. Len tried to act as if his coming home was a perfectly natural thing—but he hadn't been given to spending much of the money his cigarette commission and tutoring netted him on trips home!

I kept hoping that Rex would walk in, unshaved and repentant.

At 7 o'clock father announced that he had some accounts to look over and that he was going back to the factory. Len said he'd walk over to the office with him. A little gleam of satisfaction crossed father's face. "Interested in the old works, son?" he asked.

"Perhaps," said Len.

They started off almost like friends. I wondered if they were going to begin to like each other. For a minute I resented the fact that Rex's trouble might make father and Len understand each other—but I dismissed it at once. I had my own affairs to attend to.

I had never before called De Witt on the telephone—but I thought I owed him an apology for the engagement I had broken. I wondered how long he had waited at the boathouse. I called "732—party J," and when Mrs. Shilling's voice answered I asked for Professor Hazen. But that garrulous old lady told me, "De Professor has gone canoeing mit Miss Lowe."

"Miss Lowe?" I asked incredulously. "My cousin Corinne?

"Yes—und he telephoned from the boathouse dot he wouldn't be home for supper—I shouldn't wait."

My cousin Corinne! De Witt hadn't grieved much over my defection. He had consoled himself with Corinne. A hot wave of rage and jealousy swept over me. For the first time during all that long day I forgot Rex and his trouble. It seemed to know with sudden certainty that I hated Corinne—and loved De Witt.

A LONG EVENING

I wondered how I was going to get through the long evening. I had no studies now to occupy me; father wasn't there to make me read the evening paper aloud and Rex, my one companion, was—then in a wave a double tide of misery swept over me. De Witt was canoeing with my cousin Corinne and the Stacey girl had taken Rex away from me.

A need for action took possession of me. I couldn't sit alone and think. There was no use going up to mother's room. She would be propped up in bed reading a magazine and eating caramels out of a box which I knew she would slip under her pillow as soon as I came in. I had a vague desire for caramels—and was ashamed of the desire!

I felt a sudden distaste for all women — and an equally sudden need to tell one woman what I thought of her.

I must go to Clara Stacey and make her suffer for what she had done to Rex. I slipped on my hat and sneaked down the path very quietly. I had a feeling no one must see me, not even Nellie. I did not intend to be stopped; but I wasn't anxious to have any one in Rockbooks discover Vera Sheldon on her way to visit Clara Stacey.

Stacey's Inn was a rambling white building a few yards back from the road. It was in a grove that sloped down to the river bank. I had studied its white frame outline from two vantage points—from the river as I paddled up and down in the leaky old tub we kept for our boathouse, and from mother's carriage.

It had always possessed for me the lure of the romantic and the forbidden. I knew that gay parties motored out from the city and that the "smart set" of our town had frequent dinners there.

But father had forbidden my going. His daughter, he said, should never be seen in an inn that did a thriving business in cocktails and vintage wines. Later I remembered that scornfully.

Now, as I hurried down side streets and skulked in the shadows, I had no joy of my adventure. It had always seemed to me that there must be great fun in going to Stacey's. But there was nothing of the sort when I found myself actually on the way.

A SUBTERFUGE

At last I came to the path which led to the old white farmhouse, which now was Stacey's Inn. A merry party was swinging up the road from the river. In it I recognized Myra Barnes and Norton Gregory, a few other classmates and Mildred Francis, the beauty of the Senior Class.

I couldn't have them see me going into Stacey's. I was afraid of the boots and jeers and afraid, too, of the possibility that someone might inform father of my trip. I thought quickly. The Francis place was down the crossroads. Just beyond Stacey's. I would run in there and pretend I had come to borrow some books from Mildred.

There was no particular reason why I should have been borrowing a book from her, but that did not deter me. Fear of the scorn of the crowd and terror of my father made me willing to meet any snub Mildred might offer me. So I turned in at the Francis gate and ran up on the piazza to wait for her.

I heard her happy good-by. She, pretty, spoiled, petulant little humming bird of a girl, had no idea what it meant to suffer as I was suffering now in my fear of my father and terror about Rex.

I can see her yet as she came up the path in the June twilight. She wore a rose-colored linen dress and swung a big Leghorn hat in her hand. Her fluffy, dark hair was blowing about her pert little face and her red lips were parted with a look of expectancy that gave so much charm to her irregularly pretty face.

I was almost as frightened as if I had suddenly been admitted to audience with a royal queen. It was so seldom that I ventured into the houses of any of my classmates that venturing seemed like adventuring.

"Mildred," I began. "I've come—I've come." Then I tumbled down on the steps in a forlorn little heap and began to sob.

Mildred stood watching me for a moment, and then she ran over to my side and put her arms around me. She held me very close and petted me as if I were a child. Some friendships are born like that, born of necessity and impulsive need of someone who will understand and care.

To be Continued Wednesday.

Oh, yes, about those new party dresses. Here they are. Lady Duff-Gordon, the famous Lucile of London and foremost creator of fashion in the world, explains how to harmonize the out-door party with the outdoor party—and tells why all dresses must necessarily be party dresses anyway. Comedy in War

During Clive's campaign in India, Admiral Watson took some heavy ships up the Hooghly to assist in the reduction of the Calcutta forts. The force was landed overnight to attack the first fort, Budge-Budge, at daybreak. During the night a seaman named Strachan, who was "half seas over," strolled under the walls and clambered on top of a breach made by the ships' cannonade. Seeing only a few defenders, he shouted out, "The place is mine," and fired his pistol. The noise attracted two or three of Strachan's messmates and a few soldiers, and the fort was promptly captured, with the loss of one life, Captain Campbell, accidentally shot by one of his own men. Admiral Watson, a strict disciplinarian, sent for Strachan, who, in answer to a question, said, "To be sure, sir, it was I took the fort, but I hope there was no harm in it."

The Admiral, though highly amused, had to reprimand the man for drunkenness and absence from his ship. Strachan's answer forward he was heard to remark:

"Well, if I get flogged for taking this here fort I'll be blowed if I ever take another."

A Girl and a Man

A New and Vital Romance of City Life by Virginia Terhune Van de Water

"If I could begin right now to make money—that is, could go into business," he began impetuously

CHAPTER 1.

"I advise you to accept the position," Miss Morley," the manager of the Business School was saying. "Such opportunities do not come every day, nor to many beginners. Were I not sure of your proficiency, I would not have suggested you for Hale & Bainbridge. For they want a really capable person in their office. Why do you hesitate?"

"You think I could satisfy them?" the girl evaded.

"Certainly," the manager replied curtly. Then, as a student entered to make some inquiry, he added, "Think it over and decide. I will be with you in a minute."

He went back to his desk and left Agnes Morley to her thoughts. But these were not of doubt as to her ability to take the place offered her. She knew that she had learned more rapidly than most of the girls in her classes.

She was not conceited in acknowledging this fact. Stenography and type writing had come easily to her. She would have said that it "just happened so." To some persons languages were easy, to others mathematics. She had not found it difficult to prepare herself for a position in a business office.

She might be a little nervous at the prospect of beginning to practice that which she had been studying in this school, but that did not make her hesitate about accepting this particular place offered her.

Her hesitation was due to her knowledge that Philip Hale was the son of the senior member of the firm for whom she was to work. And she and Philip Hale were friends.

They had become acquainted a year ago at a church sociable. One of the ladies of the guild had introduced them to each other. Church affairs are great levelers of rank. Agnes Morley knew that she no other function would Philip Hale, the son of William Hale, have met as an equal the poor niece of Miss Lucy Morley, a member in good and regular standing in the West Congregational Church.

For Miss Lucy had owned a milliner's shop until ill health had forced her to retire—and not even a fashionable milliner at that. Nevertheless, she had accumulated enough money while in business to enable her to support thus far herself and Agnes, her brother's orphaned child.

Although Miss Lucy had had but a common school education, she had insisted that Agnes go through high school and later take a thorough course in an excellent business school. The elderly invalid could ill afford this, for the little money she had laid aside was dwindling fast, and her friends said that it was time that her niece was earning enough to maintain them both.

"To make that possible I intend that she shall have a good start and be well prepared!" Miss Lucy declared.

When Agnes Morley met Philip Hale the lad was a freshman at the university. He was three years younger than Agnes, and she had at first regarded him only as a nice boy. Then as they became better acquainted she found herself liking him more and more.

He talked to her of his home-life and confided to her that he did not wish to take the profession that his father had planned for him, nor for that matter finish the college course that his parents had urged him to complete.

"Dad's heart is set on my being intellectual. Just because his father was," Phil explained. "But I want to go into business, as Dad himself has done in spite of his college education. I'll take another year at the University, then I shall do as I please."

By the time the year was up, he and Agnes knew each other very well. She suspected that the lad was in love with her, yet she did not dwell on this probability. But she did realize that he liked her well enough to want to please her. This knowledge is a strong weapon in the hands of any young girl.

Only last week Philip had called on her and announced again his determination to go at once into business when he had completed his two years of college.

"I've worked through one year and a part of another all right," he remarked. "But when Spring comes, I am going to break loose and start into business."

She looked at him gravely and shook her head. "You will make a mistake if you do that, Phil," she warned him.

"Would you have me stick it out any longer and then slave at a profession even after I get through?" he demanded.

"Why not?" she parried.

He flushed. "Well," he said, "I want to be making my own way before that time. Do you realize that I am twenty-one now, and that I would be nearly twenty-five before I'd be able to earn a penny for myself, and then would have my own way to make?"

"I am twenty-four now," she reminded him steadily. "And I am just starting out to make my own way. Why should you not be doing the same when you are my age?"

It cost her an effort to speak of the fact that she was older than he, but her conscience urged her to do this.

"If I could begin right now to make money—that is, could go into business," he began, impetuously, then checked himself.

She had changed the subject quickly. It would not be right to let this lad finish his sentence. He was growing too fond of her. And she was becoming too fond of him, perhaps.

Ought she, therefore, to take a position in his father's office?

It was not likely that Mr. Hale knew that his son and Agnes Morley were good friends, although Phil might have mentioned her name to his father. She would be a kind of machine to this business man. Why need he know of her in any other capacity? She might make her living. Aunt Lucy's health was failing. The nieces had no right to reject a good position.

"Well!" The manager's query brought her back to her surroundings with a start. "Have you decided?"

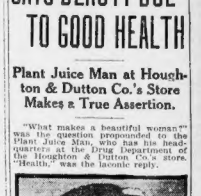
"Yes," she said, "I will take the position with Hale & Bainbridge."

To Be Continued.

SAYS BEAUTY DUE TO GOOD HEALTH

Plant Juice Man at Houghton & Dutton Co.'s Store Makes a True Assertion.

"What makes a beautiful woman?" was the question propounded to the Plant Juice Man, who has his headquarters at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store. "Health," was the laconic reply.



MISS JENNIE MARTIN.

"Health certainly means all in all to women—beauty, success and happiness—anything." Continuing, he said: "The difference between an unhealthy woman and her healthy sister is easily discernible. The one is sallow, pale, white-lipped, thin-cheeked and dull-eyed, with a drooping figure and lack-lustre hair. The other is joy to all beholders; her full figured, rosy-cheeked, with bright eyes and a skin like satin. Her lips are ruddy, her movements graceful and she is full of life and spirits."

Plant Juice has done more to restore the health and strength to women than any other preparation ever placed on the market, and the thousands of beautiful women one sees daily on the streets of Boston have but one agent to thank for their glorious—health.

That this contention is backed up by facts, it is only necessary to read the testimonials of Boston ladies who have been restored to health by Plant Juice. Take for instance the statement of Miss Jennie Martin, who resides at No. 218 Huntington Avenue, and is a well known business woman of this city and also prominent socially, which says:

"For 12 years I have suffered with my liver, kidneys and had cases of indigestion. I had headaches, pains in the region of the heart, was so nervous and restless I could not sleep at night. Nothing I ate would agree with me and would cause a gas in my stomach and cause gas from which I suffered intense pain. Finally I had to go to the hospital, where I was told that my only relief was the stomach pump, but this did not relieve me. A friend told me of Plant Juice and got a bottle to try it. The first few doses gave me so much relief that now since I have taken it for several weeks I am glad to state that it has completely cured me and I am a well woman today. I have Plant Juice to thank and cannot recommend it too highly."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

HETTY GREEN, RICHEST OF WOMEN, DEAD

MRS. GREEN'S RULES FOR BEING HEALTHY, WEALTHY AND WISE

Hetty Green once gave an interviewer the following rules which she said were those of success:

Eat only good, wholesome food.

Don't cheat. You may worry yourself into the grave in remembering your misdeeds.

Don't envy your neighbors.

Don't overdress. It makes others jealous.

Dress warmly. Vanity in cold weather causes many deaths.

Go to church. The church needs you and you need the church.

Don't forget that if your riches have been gained by unfair means the doom of heaven will be belted against you.

Be charitable. Don't falsify.

Take a lot of exercise. Walk whenever you can.

Obey all God's laws, including the precept "Give unto Caesar that which is Caesar's and unto God that which is God's."

ey" inscribed on the door plate of her Hoboken flat. "Dewey" was a little pet dog.

MATCHED WITS—AND WON.

Hetty Green matched her wits with some of the brightest minds of Wall street and almost always won.

In regard to this side of her life she once said:

"I tell you what, they have to get up before 6 o'clock in the morning to get ahead of me, for I stay up all night. I can tell you in a minute all the circumstances connected with every business transaction I have ever had. My brain is a better card index system for me than any my secretary ever devised."

Extravagance was the one unpardonable sin according to Hetty Green. Although she was kindness itself in many ways and helped many persons in her long life, she insisted that those she benefited be economical and try to save their money.

"A young girl is the prettiest thing in the world," she once said, "It makes me sick to see her beauty spoiled by silly dressing and a make-up that screams for notice no matter where she goes. Every girl should have pretty clothes if she can afford them. But more important by far is her ability to save the money she earns. That should be first.

GIRLS SHOULD SAVE.

"A girl has a hard time to be decent on six dollars a week. But she must learn to save better than she does now."

Despite her ability as a moneygetter, Hetty Green always had the reputation of playing the game fair.

"Sound business methods do not mean crooked methods," she said. "I never ask more than 6 per cent. for my loans, and very often less, but I'm might careful of every cent.

"A woman's head is as good as a man's and any day if she plays the game as we say he does and forgets the thrills."

Sound sleep, a clear conscience and plenty of good, plain food were responsible for Mrs. Green's splendid health she believed.

"Six doctors who gave me less than a year to live," was a statement she made some years before her death.

"I never had time to eat lobsters or watch ladies in pink tights with Wall street brokers."

Hetty Green's father, Edward Mott Robinson of New Bedford, died in 1865, leaving a fortune of $10,000,000, most of which was made in the whaling business.

It was her father's idea that she see New York society. She succeeded in New York very well, from the point of view of New York, for she was only invited everywhere, but liked.

New York did not please her so well as she did the metropolis. When attending a party on a winter night, Hetty would not spend money for a cab. Of stock which braved the rigors of Bering Sea on a lily whaler, she sagely gulled on a pair of wool stockings over her shoes and ploughed through the snows.

When she got back to New Bedford after her first trip to New York, she showed her father almost all the $1,000 pin money with which she had started out. The old oil king was startled, but not a little pleased.

MARRIED IN 1867.

Hetty did not marry until 1867. There is some dispute about the date of her birth and she herself was frankly uncertain concerning it when questioned once in court. She said she was born in November, 1834, but could not name the day. So she was about thirty-two years old when she became the wife of Edward H. Green, who had made a fortune in silks while United States consul-general in Manila.

Hetty brought him more than he had. Her father, when he died in 1865, left her a million dollars outright and the income from eight millions, the principal to be held in trust for her children. She had fought in court for her aunt's millions, and finally forced a compromise which probably meant a million or two to her.

BOSTON MAN HELD ON ARSON CHARGE

In the Superior Court today Harry Green of East Boston, was held in $7,500 by Judge Hitchcock on a charge of arson. Green is the forty-third person to be indicted and arrested in the so-called "arson ring" investigation which was begun by the Suffolk Grand Jury in March.

Green is charged with burning a dwelling in Winthrop, in August, and with intent to defraud an insurance company.

The trial of the arson cases will be on Wednesday.

STOCKS AND INVESTMENTS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were dull and weak in New York at noon, there having been no change of consequence in the market during the morning. During that period Amercoal, Baltimore & Ohio and American Can did not appear on the tape. Coppers grew stronger in the second hour. After opening with a slight gain U. S. Steel reacted and recovered. Mapllon issues continued weak. That also was the characteristic of the motors.

Declines at 12 o'clock included Alaska Gold 5/8, Beet Sugar 3/4, American Zinc 1, American Smelting 1/8, Car and Foundry 1/4, American Locomotive 1 1/8, Baldwin 2, Crucible 2 1/8, Distillers' 3/8, Industrial Alcohol 1/2, Maxwell 2 1/4, Studebaker 2, Willys-Overland 3/4, Westinghouse 1 and Canadian Pacific 1/2.

Among gains were Southern Pacific 1/2, Reading 3/8, Union Pacific 1, U. S. Steel 1/8, Mexican Petroleum 3/4, Marine preferred 1, Chino 3/8, Kennecott 1/2, Inspiration 1/8 and Utah Copper 3/8.

New York Central, New Haven and Norfolk & Western were unchanged. Coppers were irregular in Boston where the most active issue was Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies common. Decline included U. S. Steel common, American Zinc 1/2, New Haven 1/2, United Fruit 1, Gulf common 1/4, Olivertine 2 and Mexican 3/4.

Among gains were Copper Range 3/4, Granby 1 and North Butte 1/2.

During early trading in New York railroads got what bull support there was to speak of, but coppers were neglected by all save bears. There was also considerable U. S. Steel in common. The so-called Mexican issues were in some demand. Weakness of quarterly issues was contributed to reports of successes by allied armies. The drive is expected to bring the European war nearer an end, when demand for war supplies in this country from abroad will cease. Within half an hour the market grew stronger but most gains, as well as losses, were fractional.

The feature in Boston was the decline of Alaska Gold to the lowest price it has touched this year.

Even-Handed Justice Between Nations and in Mexico

THE President is in fighting mood. He said so himself in so many words to the Associated Advertising Clubs in the classic shade of Independence Hall.

What he wants to fight for, however, is certain rather vague principles which he does not seek very definitely to define. It seems rather unfortunate for the President to waste moments in the discussion of vague generalities and abstract principles when there are so many concrete and convincing facts in regard to Mexico crying for utterance.

"I believe," said Mr. Wilson, "that at whatever cost America should be just to other peoples, and treat other peoples as she demands that they should treat her. She has a right to demand that they treat her with justice and respect, and she has a right to insist that they treat her in that fashion, but she cannot with dignity or self-respect insist upon that unless she is willing to act in the same fashion toward them. That I am willing to fight for at any cost."

Excellent platitudes, but only platitudes at this time. What earthly bearing has this solemn restatement of universally admitted truths upon the present attitude of the United States toward Mexico? Every red-blooded American citizen crying for the protection of his fellow citizens and for the preservation of the honor of his country is eager to have full justice and nothing less than justice meted out to Mexico.

Justice, however, implies punishment as well as protection.

We are doing even-handed justice no less when we sentence a murderer to death than when we employ the forces of society to guard peaceful citizens in their daily pursuits.

Had justice been given its due in Mexico the United States troops and the hangman would have been busy in that country years ago.

Justice between nations does not materially differ from justice between individuals.

If a neighbor systematically robbed your house, or your store, accompanying his pillage by abuse and outrage, would you not expect justice to end with his removal from your neighborhood to the penitentiary?

If a group of men systematically for a period of years terrorized your family, torturing some, murdering others, subjecting your women-folk to the grossest outrages, would you not expect something more from the police authorities than abstract disquisitions on justice?

Would you expect to be lectured on your duty to respect the rights of others whose rights had not been infringed?

Would you not rather expect few words from competent authorities, but swift acts, ending with the application of the proper legal penalties to the guilty as an evidence of practical and positive justice?

President Wilson preaches to our injured and outraged people about even-handed justice and respect for rights of others as though we were the aggressors and had to make atonement to Mexico for some mysterious offenses against her honor and dignity.

He knows such is not the case.

No such offenses committed by our people appear on the record which he himself has procured and presented in the case of Mexico. His own Secretary of State has recently set forth the crimes of Mexico against our citizens.

This indictment has already been printed in the AMERICAN. It is worth printing again and again until our people shall fully understand the President's own knowledge of the blood-guiltiness of our turbulent and criminal neighbors to the south.

That he should know these things and still block every effort for punishment, for prevention and for solemn and CERTAIN assurance that this reign of outlawry shall no longer continue is amazing.

That in possession of this knowledge he should still delay action while lecturing us, the sufferers, on the need of even-handed justice would be laughable if it were not so seriously regrettable.

Here is part of what the President has said of the Mexican record:

"For three years the Mexican Republic has been torn with civil strife; the lives of Americans and other aliens have been sacrificed; vast properties developed by American capital and enterprise have been destroyed or rendered non-productive; bandits have been permitted to roam at will through the territory contiguous to the United States and to seize, without punishment or without effective attempt at punishment, the property of Americans, while the lives of citizens of the United States, who ventured to remain in Mexican territory or to return there to protect their interests, have been taken, in some cases barbarously taken, and the murderers have neither been apprehended nor brought to justice.

"It would be tedious to recount instance after instance, outrage after outrage, atrocity after atrocity, to illustrate the true nature and extent of the widespread conditions of lawlessness and violence which have prevailed. During the past nine months in particular, the frontier of the United States along the lower Rio Grande has been thrown into a state of constant apprehension and turmoil because of frequent and sudden incursions into American territory and depredations and murders on American soil by Mexican bandits, who have taken the lives and destroyed the property of American citizens, sometimes carrying American citizens across the international boundary with the booty seized.

"American garrisons have been attacked at night, American soldiers killed and their equipment and horses stolen. American ranches have been raided, property stolen and destroyed and American trains wrecked and plundered. The attacks on Brownsville, Red House Ferry, Progreso Postoffice and Las Peladas, all occurring during September last, are typical in these attacks on American territory. Carranzista adherents and even Carranzista soldiers took part in the looting, burning and killing. Not only were these murders characterized by ruthless brutality, but uncivilized acts of mutilation were perpetrated. Representations were made to General Carranza, and he was emphatically requested to stop these reprehensible acts in a section which he has long claimed to be under the complete domination of his authority."

ROBBERY, TORTURE, ARSON, RUTHLESS BRUTALITY, MUTILATION, CRIMINAL OUTRAGE!

All these crimes are solemnly, officially charged against Mexico by the President.

But what has been done to secure justice for the SUFFERERS? "Representations have been made to Carranza!"

Representations can be made to Carranza to all eternity, but justice still will fail of enforcement. If justice were to be enforced Carranza himself would be one of the first to pay the penalty.

Moreover, Carranza is incapable of administering justice or preventing the constant recurrence of these crimes.

As a matter of fact, the time for protest is past. The time for diplomatic representations is no longer. The moment for smooth phrases in the Presidential mouth is not happy today. This is the time for the sharp ring of command to the military forces of the United States to take up in Mexico the burden of restoring order and establishing justice which the Carranza government is incapable of bearing.

The President will take this course in the interest of true justice provided he is really "in a fighting mood," which we very much doubt. There is a vigorous, virile, masculine quality in a good American fighting man which President Wilson seems sadly to lack. As a word painter and decorator, as a maker of oratorical tatting, the President is a great success, but as an American fighting man—well, to say the least, his success is not yet proven, although we sincerely hope that it soon will be.

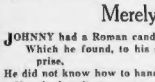
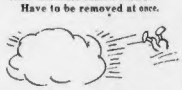
JOHNNY had a Roman candle
Which he found, to his surprise,
He did not know how to handle.
Now he hasn't any eyes.



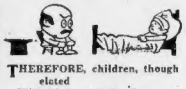
WILLIE bought a nice big rocket
Which he used in playing war.
Now he's like old Davy Crockett,
For he's in our midst no more.

TOMMY had a new toy pistol
Which did unexpected stunts.
Now the little fellow's fist 'll
Have to be removed at once.



TIM set off a keg of powder—
Made a racket, people say.
But Tim hollered even louder
When his hair was whisked away.

TESSIE had a cannon cracker
Loaded up with dynamite.
Now the nurses have to pack 'er
Up in ice bags every night.



THEREFORE, children, though elated
With high patriotic cheer,
Let the Fourth be celebrated
Down in Mexico this year!

BOBBIE'S pinwheel prematurely
Sped away with Bobbie's ear.
Doctors say that he will surely
Have to stay indoors a year.

Fire When You're Ready, Henry!

It appears that Henry Ford did not say he'd fire any of his employes who enlisted in the National Guard. It is up to him, however, to fire the subordinate who made that announcement in his name.

Just in Time

It was a mistake for those West Virginia politicians to register their mules on the voting lists. Every mule that is of military age can now be drafted for service in Mexico.

Luck

With all this time gone and only the first detachments of troops on the way to Mexico, we begin to understand how fortunate it is that the Atlantic Ocean is considerably wider than the Rio Grande.

A Record Worth Trying For

Old Zach Taylor did a job in Mexico which lasted for seventy years. The one Funston is about to do ought to better that by twenty.

Take Your Choice

Americans, apparently, must make up their mind that they cannot serve Henry Ford and their flag at the same time.

The Proof

Diaz was the greatest ruler Mexico ever had—and the only one who didn't think he could lick the United States.

And They Will Be

It will be a painful surprise to Carranza to discover that American guns are loaded with something besides notes.

England Should Honor, Not Kill, Casement

SIR ROGER CASEMENT has been convicted.

In the eye of the law, by the verdict of the jury and the sentence of the court, he is a traitor to the realm, an enemy of the King and a forsworn villain who must die the death of shame on the abhorrent gallows. In the Supreme Court of the future that verdict will be reversed and that sentence set aside.

At the judgment bar of history this felon, now condemned to die for a most high crime, will be hailed as a hero and a martyr. He will take his honored place with Emmet and with John Brown and the others of the innumerable company of just men, who in all ages and in many lands, have gone through paths of hatred, scorn and death to the bright goal of immortal renown and the increasing applause of mankind.

As it was with Emmet, so was it with Casement. His condemnation was assured before he was arraigned, and all that was left to him was to take advantage of the forms of the law and the established procedure of the courts of England, to make his defence at the bar of public opinion and his appeal to the verdict of the ages.

That defence and that appeal he made in an address whose energy and pathos must elicit the sympathy and the admiration of every good and right thinking man in the world.

The result of that appeal to the present judgment of mankind and to the future is foregone.

The prisoner at the bar is acquitted and goes forth to meet the applause of the wise and virtuous in all countries and the deathless honor and affection of the Irish people till the last generation shall have been born on the soil of Erin.

But there is another angle of vision. The student of contemporary history will ask himself what effect the trial and condemnation and eloquent defence of Sir Roger Casement must have had upon England, and what should be the comportment of liberty-loving Englishmen toward this martyr of liberty, who risked all that England might do justice to the people of Ireland.

This weighty consideration, we think, cannot better be expressed than in the following letter of instructions and comment addressed by Mr. Hearst to the Editor of the AMERICAN.

Presbyterian Hospital,
Seventieth Street and Madison Avenue,
New York, July 1, 1916.

To the Editor of the AMERICAN:

Please make an editorial on Sir Roger Casement's speech.

It seems to me a wonderful effort and tells a fundamental truth about the attitude of Englishmen toward Irishmen, and, in fact, toward everybody except Englishmen.

England learned by the loss of the American colonies that she could not treat British colonies with absolute selfishness and injustice and still retain their loyalty.

England, since then, has been more considerate of British colonies, but England has not learned that she cannot treat Ireland with brutal selfishness and injustice, even with stupid race hatred and religious prejudice, and expect loyalty there. As Casement said: "Loyalty is sentiment, not law. It rests on love, not restraint."

England can probably never learn the lesson of Ireland unless there could be a wholly successful Irish rebellion—a rebellion as successful as the revolution of our colonies. Then she would learn that, in order to have a united empire, it is necessary for every unit of that empire to be on terms of exact equality with every other unit, and for absolute justice to prevail in all.

This lesson is more important to England than it is to Ireland, because the whole future of the British Empire depends on it. Therefore, any man like Casement, trying to teach England that lesson, ought to be even more honored in England than he is in Ireland.

Of course, Englishmen cannot understand or appreciate these facts at this time. They learn like the dull boy at school only through the application of the rod.

But those enlightened minds throughout the world who genuinely love liberty and justice, and who appreciate the value of liberty and justice in framing the greatness of a State and in cementing the loyalty of a people, will hail Casement as a leader in thought and a hero in deed.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

To this exposition of England's real relations and obligations to Sir Roger Casement and to Ireland there is nothing to add.

Every sentence is weighty with truth and permeated by the sound philosophy of history.

To expect England to realize her duty to Ireland is unreasonable at this time. To expect England's rulers to perceive at this time the right path by which wise statesmanship could win from Ireland that loyalty based upon love, which is the only loyalty worth anything, would be equally unreasonable.

Not in an atmosphere of passion, suspicion, hatred, tumult and war are clear vision and just judgments and wise counsel to be expected.

Ireland must wait yet a little while for freedom.

Sir Roger Casement must wait yet a while for his vindication at the bar of the world's final judgment.

England must wait yet a while for the clear vision to see her duty and her opportunity in Ireland.

But just as surely as God reigns in His heaven and as justice and righteousness and mercy are always conquerers in the long struggles and innumerable conflicts which mark the upward and onward march of the race of man, just so surely will Ireland yet be independent, the children of Erin be free and the name and fame of Casement be held in love and honor through the ages of the ages.
